CHAMBER PARTY OFF FOR TOUR

This is good-by day for the Boston Chamber of Commerce party which is going to Europe.

At five o'clock they depart on the Merchant's Limited for New York and they won't be back until August. They sail to-morrow on the Carmania. It is the longest trip ever taken by a party of business men from this part of the country and it is an object lesson in the enterprise of Bostonians to the visiting members of the Chicago Association of Commerce who are now in this city.

Several Chicagoans are accompanying the Chamber tourists, and it is expected that a large delegation of Chicagoans will be on hand to see them off.

The tourists, accompanied by several hundred members of the Chamber and as many more relatives and friends assembled in the South Station, and although there were no formalities several speeches were made by officers of the Chamber who are remaining at home. Then the whole party was given Godspeed and with three rousing cheers followed to the train.

Those in the Party.

The party leaving this afternoon is forty strong. It consists of J. P. H. Adams, J. J. Arakelyan, William H. Bein, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Beals, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bourne, Master Bourne, E. L. Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fahey, Arthur Conery, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Graham, Wesley Jones, Henry L. Kinsside, W. E. Litchfield, Amos R. Little, James A. McKibben, Hugh Nesbit, John Nolan, F. S. Pease, W. H. Potter, H. Malcolm Priest, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Rogers, Newton Sinith, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Wrightington, Mrs. Nellie Lincoln, George H. Lufly, Harrod C. Alexander, Elmer H. Adams, Joseph F. Russell, Otis Russell and F. J. McIsaac, special representative of the AMERICAN.

The party left in two special parlor cars which were decorated by Galvin the florist in honor of the occasion.

It is purposed not only to visit several of the leading cities of Europe, with side trips from those to smaller cities, but also the committee in charge has had the suggestion of making a permanent record of the tour by having an expert stenographer take verbatim reports of the public meetings and discussions. These will later be put in book form as a kind of encyclopedia of commercial, industrial and social progress in Europe.

The Chamber's committee on the tour consists of John H. Fahey, chairman, and Messrs. E. L. Filene, Dudley Nolan, Rogers, Green and Pierce. Suggestions have been invited from business men and others to help the committee in arranging the itinerary and every effort will be made to please the majority of those who join the party.

Cities to Be Visited.

London, Paris, Brussels, Berlin and Vienna are cities which surely will be visited, if the tour is made, but the programme is to be made so elastic that many other cities may be included, to suit special interests and to provide for entertainment as well as study. Special arrangements have been made with steamship and other transportation interests, to get the most advantageous rates for the best of accommodations.

REPORTS ON THREE DEATHS IN QUINCY

Judge Albert E. Avery of the East Norfolk District Court, made findings on three inquests to-day. He found that those fired by Absar Haddad were responsible for the death of Mrs. Liza Farise on April 12, and that Jose Meir, a granite manufacturer, was stabbed to death by Vincenzo Bazzarone on the night of May 21, following a quarrel over Annie Johnson, the fifteen-year-old bride-to-be of the dead man. In the case of George Winters, a conductor, who was crushed to death between two electric cars in the Fore River yards on March 25, he found that there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the company.

She Merely Wiggled a Finger!

The woman who wiggles her third finger is immediately popular: messenger boys, newsboys, policemen and innocent bystanders at once offer themselves to do her bidding.

NEW ENGLAND'S ALL A-WIGGLE

According to advices that came to-day to the AMERICAN, New England is all a-wiggle. Everybody, lured by the attractive call to fingers of a young man from the West, is wiggling his third finger. All who wiggle, and who take care to get a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN, are promised a delicious luncheon.

As half the success of the wiggle luncheon depends upon the grocers it is highly desirable that the grocers post themselves at once. The necessity for this posting is illustrated by what happened yesterday afternoon in Lynn.

A young man who had been practising wiggling went into a grocery in suburban Lynn. The grocer's pretty young wife was behind the counter. Supposing that she knew all about the luncheon party the young man wiggled his third finger.

Expected a Joy Ride.

The grocer's wife thought the young man was inviting her out to a joy ride. She went into the back shop and told her husband, 235 pounds. The grocer beat the young man up pretty badly. When explanations could be made the grocer apologized. As a result of this incident everybody is cautioned to wait for the Sunday paper. First call for luncheon will be sounded on Sunday.

Wiggling parties are being held everywhere. There was a very happy one Wednesday night on the boat coming down from Portland. The Portland evening papers contained the wiggle announcement. All the ladies on board were practising. Other indoor games, even popular pastimes like bridge whist, poker, button-button and holding hands, are in the discard.

So many letters are at hand with reference to the wiggling of the third finger that it is impossible to answer them. Amateurs here and many others who feel themselves handicapped will find their troubles put to rest by the detailed announcement in the Sunday paper. There is no reason in the world why everybody in Eastern and Northern New England shouldn't walk around to his grocer on Monday and come home with the most delicious luncheon imaginable.

How to Practice.

In the meantime, all would better practice in the privacy of the home. A beautiful young woman, waiting for a car yesterday at Boylston street, thought to improve her idle moments by wiggling her third finger. Artist Roth, who was on the spot, waiting for another car, describes what happened.

Everybody, however, publicly or privately, must wiggle the third finger.

It isn't impossible. Try it!

All together now!

Wiggle the third finger and get the Sunday AMERICAN! Any grocer who has no evidence of negligence on the part of the company.

Wiggle the third finger and get the Sunday AMERICAN and wiggle the third finger!

BRIBERY RUMOR IN GRAFT CASE

SALEM, June 16.—Rumors floated about political and police circles this afternoon to the effect that two of the jurors hearing the Lawrence graft case had been improperly approached since the trial started. Who the jurors are and who approached them could not be learned. District Attorney Atwill declined to discuss the matter.

It was said the two jurors went to Judge Bell and complained they had been approached. When the Judge was asked about this he also declined to talk.

Philip Holland, one of the defendants, under examination by Attorney James H. Vahey, made an emphatic and sweeping denial of the confession of Fred L. Snow implicating the three other defendants.

Holland Denies It All.

Holland vigorously denied that he ever told Snow they would all have to get a Christmas present of $1,000 for Lyons, that he ever asked Snow to give $1,000 to Lyons, that he requested Snow to give $250 to Clerk Flynn "for the dirty work Flynn had done and for fixing things on the freight.

Holland startled the court to-day, while being cross-examined by District Attorney Atwill, when he declared that he told two of the three defendants to have the trial changed to the superior Court, because neither he nor anybody connected with Pulbo could get a square deal in the Lawrence Pulbo Court, where the court was originally slated to be held.

VERMONT POLICEMAN SHOT BY PRISONER

BURLINGTON, Vt., June 16.—Police Officer Christopher Miles was shot in the back to-day by Joseph Ploos, whom Miles had arrested.

The officer is now on the dangerous list in the Mary Fletcher Hospital. The doctors have failed to find the bullet. It is thought to have lodged in the lung.

Ploos then fired two shots into his own body. It is thought at the hospital that Ploos has a chance of recovery, but he is also on the dangerous list.

When Patrolman Miles went to the home of Ploos in Ward street the man made no show of resistance. The patrolman told him he was under arrest and then invited Ploos to accompany him to the station.

Miles started downstairs in the lead of the prisoner. When half way down, Ploos fired the gun which recovered in the back. He toppled to the bottom of the flight of stairs.

Ploos then turned the revolver on himself and pumped two shots into his own breast. The bullets are thought to be somewhere near the heart.

STATEWIDE PRIMARIES BILL A LAW

Governor Foss, shortly before noon today, signed the state-wide direct nominations bill. Simultaneously with the governor's act direct nominations became a law in Massachusetts. This means that next Fall's election will be held under the direct nominations system.

The bill provides for direct nominations of the State ticket, members of the Legislature, county officers, congressmen and councillors, and also for the direct election of State and district committee men and delegates to State conventions. The State convention, under the new law, will have nothing to do but draft a platform of the party principles.

Secretary of State Langtry, who is already preparing for the rush of applications for blanks under the new law, issued the following statement immediately after the Governor signed the bill:

To Send Out Blank Papers.

A supply of blank nomination papers with instructions will be sent to every city and town clerk in the Commonwealth and to the State committees of political parties in a few days. Copies can also be procured at the office of the Secretary. These papers are to be filled out and submitted to the registrars of voters or in Boston to the commissioners for certification on or before 5 o'clock p. m. Saturday, August 26, and must be filed in the office of the Secretary on or before 5 o'clock, Tuesday, August 29.

"It is required of me to supply official ballots for each political party of a separate color, equal to the number of registered voters for each polling place, a total of about 600,000 for each party. Except that in those cities and towns where primaries have been held under the Lowe law, ballots will be sent equal to the number of enrolling voters of each party.

"Democratic Progressives."

"In addition to the Republican and Democratic parties, there is also a Democratic Progressive party, which cast at the last State election the necessary 4 per cent. of the vote for Governor, qualifying it as a political party, and although doubtful of the number of votes which would be cast for its candidates, I shall be obliged to supply ballots equal to the number of registered voters for each polling place.

"The number of polling places is at present 1,367, and requires city and town clerks to send receipts immediately upon the receipt of their ballots, it being of the greatest importance that I be informed of their prompt and safe arrival, as but one set will be sent.

"Blanks and envelopes for the returns of votes will be supplied for each office and of separate color for each party. The greatest care and attention must be taken in the sending to this office of these returns, that they are to be tabulated for the entire Commonwealth, and from the results of such tabulation the official ballot for the State election is prepared.

BOTH SIDES FIRM IN SEAMEN'S STRIKE

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—A full crew was signed by the White Star liner Georgic to-day at the increased rates of pay demanded by the International Seamen's Union. The crew of the Empress of Ireland, which yesterday was reported to have come to terms with the company, to-day refused to sign unless given a flat increase of $4 per month instead of the $2.50 offered. The shipping lines to-day declared that no concessions to the striking men had been made by any company belonging to the Shipping Federation and that the men's demands would be fought to the end.

TAFT FAMILY IN BEVERLY JULY 1

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Taft will take his family to Beverly, Mass., July 1, it was announced at the White House to-day. On July 2 Mr. Taft will go to Marion, Ind., where he will speak, and July 4 he will speak in Indianapolis as the guest of former Vice President Fairbanks.

WOMAN IS DROWNED IN BATH

The body of Miss Gertrude A. Lovering, thirty-two years of age, an elocutionist, who was found dead, partially submerged in a bathtub in a room at the Hotel Hollis in Tremont street last night, was removed from the City Hospital Morgue to the home of her father at No. 18 Fellsway, West Somerville, to-day.

Medical Examiner Timothy D. Leary declared that in his opinion Miss Lovering was accidentally drowned. From the appearance of the room and the conditions under which the body was found it is thought that Miss Lovering was preparing to take a bath when she stumbled and fell head foremost across the edge of the tub. It is believed the force of the fall knocked the breath out of her and before she revived sufficiently to raise herself the water rose over her head and she was drowned.

Miss Lovering registered at the hotel late yesterday afternoon under the name of Madelaine Miller. This is said to have been the mother's maiden name. She was assigned to Room No. 401 on the fourth floor. She was a good looking woman though rather short, was well dressed and carried a hand bag. After being shown to her room Miss Lovering asked for a shoe horn, which was brought to her by John Sullivan, a bell boy. That was the last time Miss Lovering was seen alive.

Sullivan, passing the adjoining bathroom an hour later, heard the sound of running water which continued for two hours. Sullivan grew suspicious when his knocks on the bathroom door were not answered and he notified the clerk. The door of the bathroom was broken down and Miss Lovering was found dead with her feet on the floor and her head under water, dressed only in her stockings and undergarments.

Dr. Hubert Williams, the house physician, was summoned and pronounced the woman dead. Medical Examiner Leary was notified and ordered the body sent to the morgue.

The identity of the body was established through several letters and cards found in the woman's effects and among these was a contract to sell pictures made out in the name of Gertrude A. Livermore. The Somerville police were communicated with, who notified Miss Lovering's relatives. The woman had been home until Friday, failure was about to start for the police station to report her disappearance when he was told of her death.

Miss Lovering was the daughter of George H. Lovering, who for many years conducted a grocery store in Charlestown. Up to three years ago Miss Lovering was a teacher of elocution. Her health failed however, and she was obliged to give up teaching and recently had suffered many nervous attacks.

PETITION TALC FIRM INTO BANKRUPTCY

The American Talc Company of No. 22 Custom House street was petitioned into bankruptcy at the Federal building. There are three creditors, George W. Benedict, with a claim of $280.65; Fiske Mann factoring Company for $309.89, and the Colonial Trust company for $123.17. On May 22, 1911, the Talc Company assigned to Howard V. Knight of Boston.

LINER IVERNIA REFLOATED TO-DAY

QUEENSTOWN, Ire., June 16.—The Cunard liner Ivernia, which crashed into Daunt's Rock in a fog on May 24, was refloated to-day. She was towed further inshore for more repairs, after which she will proceed to Liverpool under her own steam, where she will go into drydock.

ACQUIT DR. BRAY ON FORGERY CHARGE

Dr. Edwin V. Bray was found not guilty of a charge of forgery to-day in the Lynn District Court. Bray was accused of forging a postal card with the name of Dr. Junius Keene, superintendent of the Emergency Hospital, Lynn, and obtaining eight cents worth of drugs from a Boston firm.

MISS LOVERING, FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL BATHTUB

Somerville woman had been missing and registered at hotel under assumed name a few hours before her death.

BOY BOUND AND GAGGED IN FIRE

Edward F. Lynch, twelve years of age, was found bound and gagged secretly at 3 a. m. to-day, with a fire blazing about him that soon would have burned him to a crisp, in the office of the H. P. Hood Milk Company, No. 882 Broadway, Chelsea.

The boy first declared that he had been placed there by two men. Then after two hours questioning by the police in the presence of his parents the boy asserted that he did it all himself.

The police declared that they were not certain that the boy had told the entire truth, however, and began an examination of his remarkable stories.

Patrolmen Cunningham and McKenzie discovered the boy when they were trying doors. They were attracted particularly to the Hood office by the sight of a blaze through the glass in the door. Looking inside they saw that a pile of paper and other debris had been set on fire and that the entire office would soon be in flames.

Found Gagged and Bound.

The policemen smashed open the door. The place was filled with smoke. They groped about until they found the gas and lighting it they were amazed to find a boy bobbed on the floor bound with cord and with a rag in his mouth.

The boy was tied in such a manner that he could neither walk nor talk. The flames were creeping near him. Already the smoke had half choked the little fellow and he was nearly strangled.

One of the policemen slashed the cords and tore the rag from his mouth, while the other put out the flames in the combustible material.

BIRD MEN IN GREAT AIR FEATS

Wholesale aviation was offered Greater Boston to-day.

Thousands of people went out to Readville Park to see a brand new flying competition, a three-story race between two aeroplanes in the air and a powerful motor car on the ground race track.

Many other lovers of sensational flying went to the Mets Aerodrome at Waltham to see a continuation of the daring flights which astonished the city yesterday.

The Waltham schedule called for a repetition of the flights of yesterday, in which Harry N. Atwood and Earle L. Ovington flew over the city proper in a way that no aviator has ever done before.

The first flight here by a woman operating a machine was also on the cards for to-day at Waltham. Mrs. Lily Martin, the comely bride of James V. Martin, prepared to make her initial flights in the land of the Stars and Stripes.

Ignace Semenlouk and Paul Rindensky, the Russian birdmen who are competing for the Waltham Meet prizes, were also on hand early, tuning up their big machines.

The three-story race at Readville Park promised one of the most spectacular and thrilling contests that ever took place in the history of aviation.

The conditions called for Lincoln Beachey and C. C. Willmer, both daring aviators, to circle the Readville track at different levels in their respective machines, while John J. Kingsley, the amateur motor car racer, sped around the track on the ground in his Thomas car. The distance is for five miles, motor against aeroplanes.

Thousands of Bostonians who could not get out to either Readville or Waltham this afternoon will get out for the aerial contests.

SUE MRS. GLOVER FOR $3,000 AUTO

Mrs. Lillian M. Glover, widow of Clarence F. Glover, who was killed in Waltham, has been attached for $3,000, the papers being filed in East Cambridge by Lawyers Samuel D. Elmore and Jesse M. Gove.

Elmore and Gove are the special administrators of the Glover estate, over which there have been many legal battles since the last one resulting in the jury disagreeing.

The attachment is the result of the disappearance of one of Glover's autos. This is the machine in which Glover went for a ride on the evening that he was fatally shot while in his laundry.

The lawyers have been trying to get hold of the auto but when they called at the house recently for it Mrs. Glover told them that it had been sold. The lawyers protested that it belonged to the Glover estate. The widow said it didn't, it belonged to her.

GOVERNMENT BUYS EAST BOSTON SITE

The United States government to-day bought from the East Boston Company the wharf property located at No. 201 Marginal street, East Boston, containing 166,930 feet, for a new immigration station, in part payment the government conveys to the East Boston Company the site originally purchased for the new immigration station at Jeffries Point, containing 52,000 square feet, and also pays them $30,000 in cash. The government has appropriated $350,000 for the construction of the new immigration station at East Boston, and is expected that, owing to the delays in the construction of public buildings due to an insufficient number of government architects, Secretary Nagel of the Commerce and Labor Department will select a local architect in connection with the construction of the new station.

AVIATORS MAKE DARING FLIGHTS

pearance of any more flights over the city tonight. The topic of the afternoon was: "Seen any aviators in the sky."

None knew when one of the daring skysailors would cut athwart the sky, balancing bird-like, in his speedy aircraft. Yesterday's flights to town by Ovington and Atwood were the sensation of the day.

To Ovington go the laurels for the accomplishment of the first flight in an aeroplane over this city. He so far outclassed Grotinger-White's flight to Boston light that there is hardly an excuse for a comparison.

Drops Letters 2,500 Feet.

Ovington's Blériot monoplane, the Dragonfly, with the daring Tech graduate in it, completed the trip from the Mela field over Boston and back in about thirty minutes. When Ovington started his propeller he had with him a sheaf of letters, one for the AMERICAN and several for other Boston newspapers and two for the Mayor. They were attached to little parachutes and he let them drop from the skies while he was whizzing along at a rate of nearly seventy miles an hour.

The crowd at the field cheered him until it was out of sight. His flight extended over the Newtons, Cambridge, part of Brookline, to Boston proper, and then reaching from the north of the Charles out over the harbor. He circled Governor's Island after he had dropped his letters into the streets.

From the beginning of the flight he maintained an altitude of about 3000 feet, but when about over the heart of the city he descended to about 2500 feet from the roof tops and threw out the letters.

People on ferries, steamers and yachts saw him plainly as he circled everybody's island and started on the return. He averaged seventy miles per hour.

The Charles river was the chief guiding mark during the whole flight, although he had a map of the course in front of him as he flew. Upon leaving the harbor, however, he mistook the Mystic river for the Charles and had proceeded over Charlestown before he realized his mistake. He then turned sharply over Charlestown to the Charles river dam and from thence, resuming again an altitude of about 3,600 feet, he continued on to Waltham and the aviation field. His greatest altitude was 3,690 feet, as registered by the aneroid barometer on his monoplane.

Atwood Flies Over Offhand.

It was not until after Ovington had returned to the field that it was first known that Atwood was to take part in the Waltham meet. Shortly after 4 o'clock the manager of the meet, Charles H. Metz, took up the matter with W. Starling Burgess with whom Atwood is at present connected.

Within 10 minutes the two men had reached an agreement satisfactory to both and Burgess telephoned to Squantum. Atwood could not be found at first and Burgess learned over the telephone that the aviator had left Squantum to catch a train for New London, Ct. A messenger was hastily despatched to the railroad station after him and he was caught with one foot on the train at the Atlantic station.

In the most matter-of-fact way imaginable he returned to the field, climbed into his Burgess-Wright biplane, after telephoning that he would be on hand in a few minutes, and started on his daring over-city flight to Waltham.

He crossed South Boston and at an altitude of about 2,500 feet he crossed the city proper, sweeping over the State House dome and the Hotel Touraine. He dropped a handkerchief on the Common and then following along the line of the Charles river he sped away to Waltham in almost a direct line.

He reached the Waltham field at ten minutes after 5 o'clock, the flight occupying just fifteen minutes. He averaged sixty miles an hour in the air.

Had Taken Long Morning Trip.

Atwood's flight from Squantum to Waltham was the more remarkable for the fact that yesterday morning he performed the wonderful feat of flying forty-five miles over Boston's suburbs with a passenger. Accompanied by Dr. Percy L. Reynolds of Amherst College, he flew from Squantum inland over Roxbury and Dorchester, alighting in Franklin Field for gasoline.

The flight was resumed at Dorchester and extended over Milton and the Blue Hill section. The machine was fifty-five minutes in the air at one time.

Atwood had hardly arrived at the Waltham field when he arose again with Ovington as a passenger, remaining in the air, dipping and circling more than seven minutes.

Mrs. Adelaide Ovington, the wife of the aviator, although she had never been in an aeroplane before in her life, went up with Atwood as a passenger. He circled about the field four times with her, remaining in the air seven minutes and twenty-four seconds.

Mrs. Ovington was delighted over her trip with Atwood. "I shall never forget it," she said to-day.

"At no time did I feel any anxiety, though it was the first time I ever went up. I felt far more secure in the machine than I have felt on solid ground lots of time. The idea of buoyancy is not startled out when you are aloft, much to my surprise.

"I felt just as I would feel if riding on the front seat of a fast automobile. The wind was very strong and on the plunges my breath was taken away.

"If my husband gets another machine I shall see to it that it has two seats."

More Daredevil Feats.

Both Ovington and Atwood performed exhibition feats of right-hand banking and dippings, each swooping down from an altitude of about 1,000 feet to within three or four feet of the turf and soaring up again, to the delight and amusement of the throng.

Several times Ovington shut off his engine when several hundred feet in the air and coasted down at a sharp angle, turning up again when the ground was almost reached, with the propellers again moving, after having been motionless for three or four seconds. This has never been done before in any monoplane and was considered by the French monoplanes on the field as the acme of daredevilry.

BEACHEY TO FLY OVER BOSTON FROM READVILLE PARK

READVILLE RACE TRACK, June 16.—Glenn Curtiss's aviators, Lincoln Beachey and Charles C. Witmer, prepared their Curtiss biplanes for their two days' exhibition which opened this afternoon.

Beachey announced that he will fly over Boston this afternoon. He says he does not want to be outdone by Atwood and Ovington.

Both Beachey and Witmer planned to perform most spectacular feats during their meet here. For the first time in history, aeroplanes will race an automobile. The race will be five miles, or five times around the track.

In the automobile will be Jean J. Kingsley. Twenty-five feet above him will be Beachey, and 100 feet above Beachey will be Witmer. Each man declares he will win. It should be a thrilling race.

London Complains of a Dull Hotel Season.

LONDON—The London hotels never hate experienced a poorer season. For the month of June nearly all are far from full, owing to the foolish policy of demanding unreasonable tariffs. Superfluous British Women.

LONDON—Further census returns show that there are 1,178,217 females in excess of males in Great Britain. The figures, however, would be greatly reduced if the soldiers and sailors abroad were counted. Women continue to increase faster than men, as they have constantly since 1821.

ROURKE HAS NEW GARBAGE PLAN

Commissioner of Public Works Rourke announced today his intention of solving the refuse problem of the city by letting out the disposal of garbage by contract and having the city take charge of the ashes and general refuse.

This is at variance with the commissioner's former belief that better results would accrue to the city if all of this work is done by contract.

It is his intention to advertise for proposals for the disposal of the garbage. About 10 per cent. of the refuse matter of the city is garbage and it can be disposed of much more economically than general refuse for the reason that the by-products are marketable. To dispose of the city's garbage will cost between $25,000 and $50,000 in the opinion of the commissioner.

A strong protest from the contractors who have been bidding for the work of disposing of all the city's refuse is expected.

"There is plenty of room on inland dumps to take care of Boston's refuse," says the commissioner. "If the project of filling in the South Bay is carried through it will require thousands of yards of waste matter and enough dumping ground will be available to last the city for years."

The police were notified. Louis has had a habit of playing along the Albany street docks. If he does not appear to-day search may be made of the South Bay waters.

WHAT WILL YOUR WIFE DO WITH YOUR LIFE INSURANCE?

Will the promoter of some "wild-cat investment" get it?

Is the judgment of the trusted friend infallible?

Don't you want to bar the door to this danger?

Don't you want to assure her a steady income to keep the home intact? She is accustomed to planning by the month and is apt to be bewildered by the payment of a lump sum, especially as it comes in the hour of sorrow.

The John Hancock issues a policy which guarantees a sure and steady income monthly to the wife (or other beneficiary) as long as she lives.

This policy perpetuates the home more effectively than any other form of life insurance. It is fireside insurance; it is the enduring token of thoughtful affection.

GREAT $35,000 CONTEST ENDS

It's all over!

The AMERICAN'S great $35,000 Prize Contest closed last night at the stroke of 10.

The competition is without a peer in the annals of newspaper enterprise.

In addition to providing a fortune in prizes, for AMERICAN readers, it has been the magnet which caused thousands and thousands of the readers of this newspaper to renew old and pleasant acquaintances during the hard-fought battle for vote supremacy.

The Contest Department at No. 275 Devonshire street will be one of the busiest places in little old New England for the some few weeks to come, recording and checking the candidates' accounts.

Notice will be given through the columns of the AMERICAN of the exact date when the final list of candidates' standing will be printed.

It would be well for every one in any way interested in the contest to closely watch the columns of the AMERICAN, daily and Sunday, for this announcement.

The vote coupons which have appeared in the AMERICAN since June 8 will be valueless after Thursday, June 22. This gives one candidate one whole week in which to get in these coupon votes.

Any candidate who questions the accuracy of his total given in the list of standing printed in last Sunday's AMERICAN may have his account checked up item by item, by furnishing the Contest Editor with a complete itemized list by dates of all votes and subscriptions turned in.

It is possible that not many questions of inaccuracy appearing in the last printed list, should be checked up NOW, as that each candidate who is at all in doubt about the accuracy of the figures printed may be absolutely satisfied that every vote is properly recorded.

OFFERS PARK FREE FOR SUNDAY SPORTS

Colonel Roger A. Scannell, who imported the famous Irish "Puck" named Skelig Mohr, has donated the free use on Sundays of Rugby Park, Mattapan, for benevolent and charitable organizations who may wish to give a donation to the Free Home for Consumptives. Colonel Scannell believes that the Sunday "blue" laws are too rigidly enforced and that poor people especially should have recreation on Sunday. Next Sunday the County Cork Benevolent Club will use the park for sports.

LODGE CUTS WATER BILLS

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Apparently uneasy over the growing habit of mineral water drinking by Senators and their office staffs, Senator Lodge introduced and got adopted a resolution which is expected to check the practice. The resolution inserts in the committee on audit and control of contingent expense control of all expenditures for running expenses of the Senate.

Senator Bacon inquired whether the passage of the resolution would not interfere with existing contracts.

"Not at all," said Mr. Lodge, "it relates to running expenses—such as mineral water for use in the Senate office building."

The bills for mineral water for senators' offices are said to have been unusually heavy, for the senators demand and get the most expensive brands. The same spirit of economy that is cutting down the water bills is held responsible by senators for the failure of the Summer lemonade to appear in the Senate cloak rooms.

HOW TO BEAUTIFY YOUR COMPLEXION

"Adding permanent beauty to the face, neck and arms is by no means a difficult matter," says Mac Martyn in the San Francisco Times. "But the greatest mistake which thousands of women make daily is the practice of smearing their faces with powder. This stops up the pores in the skin, causing pimples, enlarged pores and other facial blemishes that are difficult to overcome.

"The best skin whitener and complexion beautifier known to beauty specialists is made by dissolving four ounces spurmax in one-half pint hot water, with two teaspoonfuls glycerine added. This inexpensive lotion is very fine for clearing up a rough, oily or sallow skin. It quickly corrects a shiny, lifeless condition, giving the skin a smooth, satiny tone. After once you try it, you will have no further use for face powder, as it doesn't show or rub off so easily."

BULL SERVANTS ON THE STAND

ALFRED, Me., June 16.—The contestants to the will of Mrs. Ole Bull started today to put the domestics and servants in Mrs. Bull's home on the witness stand in the will trial. The first of these was Miss Paude Kelly of Cambridge, who was Mrs. Bull's cook at Studio House during the closing months of Mrs. Bull's life.

Miss Kelly testified to seeing Miss Margaret Sofie O'Shieg Nicolin ("I'm a strange Hindu medicines for Mrs. Bull, among them the mysterious red paste of which Siri Swamander spoke so bitterly. The cook swore that Mrs. Bull grew worse a week after the beginning of this Hindu treatment, that her feet swelled, her eyes bulged and her hands grew puffy.

Mrs. Kelly proved a marked change, as a witness, from the Servingirls and others who are inclined toward the mystical Hindu cults. She is a practical Irish woman of middle age. Some of her testimony raised laughter especially when she said that Mrs. Bull was the only one in Studio House who was on time at breakfast.

Even the Judge Smiles.

Miss Kelly testified that Dr. and Mrs. Jacobs Chandler Boose and Miss Noble were with Mrs. Bull at last Winter in Cambridge. Nicola Ruberto was there most of the time. Miss Sarah J. Farmer visited there, so did the Swami Paramananda.

Q.—Did you ever hear anything like arguments between Mrs. Bull and the Boses and Miss Noble? A.—All I noticed was that Mrs. Bull was the only one who was punctual at breakfast.

This caused a general laugh. Judge Hobbs, the venerable probate justice, smiled. Then Miss Kelly added: "I have seen the others creeping along when they came in, though they were afraid of Mrs. Bull."

Charles K. Cobb, of counsel for the will interjected: "Guess they were afraid of Miss Kelly." This raised a second round of laughter at the picture Mr. Cobb's remark conjured up of a household of Hindu Swami and occultists being in terror of the cook.

Q.—Did you know of any Indians or Hindus being entertained by Dr. Boos? A.—Yes, ten or twelve Hindus were there one evening. Mrs. Bose did some cooking for them.

Q.—Did you see Mrs. Briggs there? A.—Yes.

Saw Medicine Prepared.

At another question Mr. Cobb objected. Mr. Whipple retorted. "We want no more of these dirty refinements that make people at large simply snicker at the processes of the law which exclude matters that common sense would wish to see admitted.

Q.—While you were working for Mrs. Bull in Cambridge last Winter did you ever see Miss Noble prepare any medicines for her? A.—Yes, there was a package of stuff that came from India. There were six bottles of a dark brown liquid and a red paste. She used to mix the paste with honey with a glass spoon.

Q.—Did you notice any difference in Mrs. Bull's appearance? A.—She started to take this medicine? A.—Yes, about a week after she started her feet swelled, her eyes bulged out and her hands were puffy.

Q.—Did Miss Noble ever leave this paste around where you could get it? A.—No, the liquid was always left in the pantry, but she kept the other herself.

BOY BOUND AND GAGGED IN FIRE

the other one put out the fire. The boy was carried out into the open air and the men worked over him until he was revived and able to talk.

The boy's foot had been tied firm with a heavy cord, his hands were fastened together, a piece of cotton batting had been forced into his mouth and a handkerchief tied tightly over it in a hard knot.

When the boy was able to talk he told the policemen his name and said that he lived with his parents at No. 112 Spencer avenue, Chelsea. Then he related this weird story:

"Two Men Grabbed Me."

"I was sent last night on an errand for Father Thomas A. Quinn of the St. Rose Church. He sent me about 6 o'clock to St. Joseph's Seminary in Brighton. I got back to Chelsea about 9 o'clock.

"When I got to the corner of Broadway and Crescent avenue two men grabbed me. They said that they would kill me if I cried out. They took me down Spencer avenue and Parker street to the old clay pit at the foot of Clark avenue.

"There they told me that if I did not do what they wanted me to they would kill me. They took me to the rear window of the Hose House and broke a window and shoved me through. Then the men crawled through the window after me.

"As soon as they got inside they bound me and gagged me just as you found me. Then they ransacked the place for valuables, but they did not find any and so they left me on the floor, first building a fire so that I and the office would be burned up."

The boy was taken to the station house and Lieutenant Frank Tucker took a hand at questioning him. They managed to mix the boy up somewhat and suspected that he was not telling the truth, although they did not believe that he had done the job alone.

Boy Contradicts Himself.

The police sent for the boy's parents about 4 o'clock and they were greatly agitated when they heard the story the little fellow told. They had believed that he was in bed until they were summoned by the police. The boy's mother, in order to test her son's story, called Father Quinn on the phone and asked him if he had sent Edward on an errand last night, as the boy had related.

"No, I did not send him any place," replied the priest.

Then the mother and the police went at the boy again and in a little while he broke down and said that he had done the whole thing himself. This was harder to believe than the boy's first story, and the police questioned him at length.

"How in the world did you tie that handkerchief around your mouth with your hands already tied, as you say they were?" asked one of the policemen.

"I tied the knot in the handkerchief with my teeth," replied the boy.

"Well, that beats me!" ejaculated the members of the force who heard this explanation.

"But you would have been burned to a crisp," said the boy's mother.

Held by Juvenile Court.

"I know—I know," said the boy and he began to cry.

"I never heard of anything like this," said Lieutenant Tucker, and he ordered that the boy be locked up on a charge of breaking and entering upon his own confession.

Later the boy was taken to court and arraigned before Judge Cutter. Before a jury, his case was held for the Juvenile Court next Tuesday.

"We are more inclined to believe the boy's last story than his first one," said the police, "but we can't see how he could have tied himself in that manner."

Mrs. Lynch, the boy's mother, said:

"I can't account for this. I think that the boy's mind must have been temporarily unbalanced. He has been reading trashy fiction. He may have been influenced by that. Edward is a good boy. He goes to school and is bright. We thought he was in bed."

PIGEONS STOP CLOCK ON THE LAW COURTS BUILDING

Time has been flying faster than the Pemberton square pigeons could fly. So the pigeons stopped the big clock on the Law Courts Building in the square. There has been deep mystery about the clock stopping. It was thought that a court clock ought to keep perfect time. Clock repairers would start the clock going, but could give no reason for it stopping so often. Finally one of the court officials spied one of the Pemberton square pigeons alighting on the tip of the minute hand of the clock. The pigeons flew away in a moment. But the clock stopped. The observer timed it by his own watch to see. The pigeon had stopped the clock. The weight of the plumb bird, acting on the end of the minute hand as a lever, had jarred the clock's works enough to stop the whole delicate machinery. They will put a screen in front of the clock-face to keep the birds from roosting on Father Time's hands.

AUTO KILLS LAD, THEN RACES OFF

NEW YORK, June 16.—Detectives and policemen are searching for the heartless chauffeur who, in a black car, raced through Brooklyn streets with a woman in the tonneau, buried twelve-year-old Charles Sommers dead into the door of his home at No. 747 Bedford avenue, at 10 o'clock Saturday night and then, as the cries of approach as he stood at Bedford and Flushing avenues. Ten feet away, playing in front of his home, was the Sommers boy. The machine shot around the corner, the chauffeur ignoring the warning hand held up by the policeman, and almost running him down.

Sommers had no time to dodge the car. He was struck full force and his body buried a distance of twenty-five feet. The body fell at the feet of the dead boy's mother on the first step leading to the hallway. Mrs. Sommers dropped unconscious.

The woman in the car leaned over, said something to the chauffeur, and the car leaped forward with such speed that a rear wheel hit the curbing.

GIRL WIFE NO. 2 WILL AID JONES

Miss Mazie Elliott, seventeen, and with the fragile prettiness of a doll, told to-day for the first time the story of her wooing by Robert J. Jones, the second husband, who is the result of their marriage in Nashua a week ago is in the Charles street jail on a charge of bigamy. To-morrow he will face Judge Parmenter in the Municipal Court to learn the disposition of the charge which Mrs. Grace M. Mosher-Jones, of Cleveland has brought. She exhibits a certificate showing that she and the youngster to whom she was married by Dr. Travis, lowered at the long inches of Miss Jones, a daughter of the late Capt. Charles Sands, who had made his home in the Sound on the South shore.

"I will gladly go to jail if it would help Bobby," said the girl wife to-day, "and I am sure he did not intend to do me a thing. He and I have talked it over and I am sure he loves me. I feel better if I could cry about it, but I haven't. I've used all my strength to find a way to help him."

Flattered by Attentions.

"I met Bobby while I was dancing in Ward and Vokes' show. He was one of the big nits of the show and I was flattered when he paid attention to me. He was so nice to me that I would not help liking him and his intentions seemed so honorable that I told him about myself. He then and there told me that he had been married.

"But I was to make sure, while he went to Cleveland without telling him anything about it, and asked Bobby to find if they could some record of the marriage. Bobby broke back that there was none and that he was free to act.

Then Bobby dedicated a song to me. It was called 'Mazie.' I thought that was a great deal, when he asked me to marry him. I love him so much that I would do anything for him now.

"You see, I am little that I thought maybe people wouldn't believe we were only and truly married and I felt bashful about it. And it was a strange sort of a way to be married. I whispered to myself: My Husband! I had a funny creepy sensation, but I did not doubt Bobby and I would do anything for him now.

"Bobby Meant No Harm."

"His wife, or this woman who calls herself his wife, must have made him unhappy. She had not a particle of sympathy for him when he broke down and sobbed like a baby in the court room. The poor boy did not mean to harm her or to injure me, I know.

"Besides, that woman is old. She must be nearly thirty,' and the shy little glances of the reporter again for confirmation.

"I did not know anything about his arrest until I had waited hours at his room for him Wednesday. He did not come home and I was worried about him. Then Mr. Waite came and I did not know then that he was a policeman or I should not have told him anything. I would rather have bitten off my tongue. But he took me to the station house and told me I was married to him.

Here the low voice broke and the tears that would bring relief were on the point of coming. But the girl checked them and turned to answer the questions of the men met with whom she is making her home.

She is so diminutive and fragile that she looks like a seventeen years, and her big blue eyes and red gold hair gave her more the appearance of a product of the Nuremberg toy shops than of a woman who is going through a heart crisis.

HELD AS FORGER AT WIFE'S GRAVE

The highly dramatic arrest of Herard B. Gurney, as he turned from the grave in which he had just buried his wife laid to rest, caused scores of Melrose people to go to-day to the Woburn court where the young Melrose salesman was arraigned on a charge of uttering a forged check. Gurney was held in $500 bail for a further hearing next Thursday. He was represented by Attorney Haynes of Haynes & Miller of Boston.

No more theatrical climax to a mental mood have been arranged. Mrs. Gurney, the daughter of Mayor Mower and the secretary of several previous mayors, was one of the most popular women in Melrose. It was during the funeral services in the City Hall and the shops had been closed out of respect to her memory. To only one of the throng had such a tribute been paid to the city, and that woman was Mary A. Livermore.

In the hindmost carriage of the funeral procession were Gurney, Chief Hall and Patrolman William C. McCarthy. As the procession was passing the spot where the grave and the young husband turned aside from the throng, they placed him under arrest as quietly as possible. Few of the hundreds who were at the funeral knew a conflict was on, but the news soon spread and it caused intense excitement.

NO FUMES FROM OUR BRIQUETTES

Much anthracite coal gives off an offensive gas while burning. Of course, a well-regulated ventilating draft may carry it up the chimney—but this is not always the case. Persons in delicate health are affected by coal gas fumes to such an extent that physicians insist on a change in fuel in sick rooms where hard coal is being used.

Portsmouth Briquettes are made from clean coal—finely ground and mixed with a combustible binder. Their quick ignition consumes all the gas made by combustion—and they produce an intense, satisfactory heat—free from coal gas odors.

United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, the blind orator from Oklahoma, will be the guest of the Hayes Square Outing Club at their annual banquet which will be held in the Lexington street armory.

Senator Gore arrived in Boston early this morning and is quartered at the Parker House. He was tendered a dinner by Mayor Fitzgerald at Young's Hotel this afternoon at which he met a number of the Democratic leaders.

There will be plenty of local oratorical talent, however, as the full list of speakers for the banquet at which Judge Charles S. Sullivan will preside includes Gov. Eugene N. Foss, The Commonwealth of Massachusetts"; Mayor Fitzgerald, "The City of Boston"; Rev. Thomas J. Gasson, "The Church"; David I. Walsh of Clinton, "Ideal Citizenship"; Senator Gore, "The United States"; Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy, "The Day We Celebrate," and Congressman William F. Murray.

President Joseph H. Brennan of the club has the assistance of this committee in the arrangements for the celebration: Joseph H. Brennan, chairman; Edward J. Bobbyn, secretary; Hon. Charles S. Sullivan, Councilor Daniel J. McDonald, Representative William J. Murray, Michael J. Dorsey, John Burke, Matthew J. Green, John Hogan, Martin S. Carney, James Mahoney, Thomas R. Melville, William J. Carley, John B. Fitzgerald, Jr., and Lieut. Daniel J. Cadigan.

Open House at Clubs.

Every social club in the district will hold open house to-night and to-morrow. Preparations have been made to entertain thousands of visitors and the lunch string will be out until the stroke of 12 closes the celebration to-morrow night.

To-day the small boy got his fun in watching the fakirs set up for business on the Sullivan square playground, but a year this spot takes on the appearance of the old-fashioned but popular county fair and to-morrow will be no exception. License Clerk Casey has issued permits to nearly 200 of these up to date vendors and entertainers and there will be a constant din from the ballyhoo men until the day's festivities come to an end. The African dodger with hardwood skill, the cane board man, the strength testers, the hot frankfurter merchants, the pink lemonade brigade, the merry-go-round, Punch and Judy, in fact all of those features which accompany the holiday crowds will be prominent.

The main interest for the thousands of visitors to the district will be in the two parades. The matter of the routes which the processions will take has been the cause of some dissension but this has been adjusted and the routes as mapped out will give nearly every resident of the district an opportunity to view the spectacle without journeying far from his own fireside.

Horribles Parade.

The morning parade of Antiques and Horribles will have some novel features that are calculated to amuse. It will start at 9.30 a. m. under the guidance of Chief Marshal Daniel F. McVarish and will move over the following route:

Bunker Hill street to Chelsea, to City square, to Park, to Common, to Winthrop square, to Bartlett, to Elm, to High, to Monument avenue, to Warren, to Thompson square, to Main, to Oak, to Russell, to Pearl, to Bunker Hill, to Mishawum, to Rutherford avenue, to Essex, to Hancock square where it will be reviewed.

The civic and military parade in the afternoon will commemorate the historical occasion of the day. It will start at 2 p. m. and move over the following route: Bunker Hill, to Marion, Princeton, Tufts, Bunker Hill, Chelsea, Prospect, Trimont, Monument square north, west and south sides, Monument avenue, Warren avenue, Park, Common, Adams, Chelsea, City square north and west sides, Harvard street, Washington, Union, Main, Sullivan, Russell, Amherst, Main, Mishawum, Rutherford avenue, Seaver, Gardner, Main, Bunker Hill, Elm, High, Monument square south and east sides.

A CONSTANT ITCHING AND BURNING

Night and Day. Cried All the Time. Used Most Everything. Cuticura Remedies Cured Itching in 3 Days. Healed in 8 Days.

"I was taken with the itch in April, 1904, and used most everything. I had a friend pay me a visit from Cumberland, and she advised me to use Cuticura Remedies which I did. The cure was certain, quick, and I use them to this day. I had it terribly under my knees. I only used one box of Pills, but two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and I use the Cuticura Soap all the time. I hope this will benefit others, as it has me, after Dr. —— and others could do nothing for me." (signed) Miss Lu Johnson, 1825 Ninth St., N. W., Washington, D. C., April 3, 1910.

In a later letter Miss Johnson adds: "The trouble began with an eruption under my knees, and extended upwards toward my waist, until I was not able to sit down. It kept a constant itching and burning all the time, night and day. I went to my doctor but he could do me no good after I do not know how many medicines he gave me, and then told me I would be compelled to go to a skin specialist, which I positively refused to do. I cried all the time. I finally made up my mind to try Cuticura Remedies, and tried Cuticura Pills, Ointment and Soap, and was entirely cured of the itching three days after I started using them. The healing took about eight days. I consider Cuticura Remedies marvelous, and would recommend them everywhere. I hope everyone suffering from any skin disease will try Cuticura, for it is none the worse."

The Cuticura Remedies afford the speediest and most economical treatment for skin and scalp troubles. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., sole props., 139 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

Mailed free, samples of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, with 32-p. book on skin treatment.

NO FOOD FOR 56 DAYS; MAY LIVE

MARLBORO, June 16—So helpless and emaciated after fifty-six days in a swamp without food or shelter that any large quantity of edibles might cause his death, William D. Hanley lies to-day at the home of his brother, John Hanley, in a critical condition. His recovery from the strange experience is a question of his having the most tender care. His bride of a few months, who had mourned him as dead, is constantly at the bedside. Dr. J. J. Kelley, the attending physician, when asked to-day if Hanley would recover, replied: "I cannot tell, his condition is very weak."

Hanley's disappearance April 20 caused a sensation. No reason could be given except that he had been suffering from trouble with his head since an attack of the grip, and this it is thought may have unbalanced him.

He could give no explanation to-day after he had gathered enough strength to talk. He said he had wandered into the swamp, that he had occasionally seen persons pass but that for some reason he could not explain, he had been unable to call them. Most of the time, he said, he had spent lying upon the wet ground huddled up in his overcoat, soaked by the heavy showers and chilled by the night air.

Big News For Harvard.

There will be a big special news feature of particular interest for Harvard and Cambridge in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

20,000 SEAMEN VOTE ON STRIKE

Whether 20,000 seamen of all coastwise boats will go on strike will be determined to-day. Delegates from all Atlantic coast ports are attending a conference with the ship-owners in New York, after which their negotiations will be reported to a mass meeting of sailors, firemen, cooks and stewards and a vote on a strike will be taken.

H. P. Griffin, vice-president of the International Seamen's Union of America, said to-day that 20,000 men would be involved in the strike and that coastwise traffic from Maine to New Orleans would be tied up unless the ship-owners accede to the union's demand for more pay, better food and better sleeping quarters.

If a strike is called it will become effective to-morrow morning.

The important development in the general shipping strike in foreign ports was the concession of an advance of $2.50 a month in wages to all employes involved by the White Star Company and the Canadian Pacific Railroad, an example which was followed later by the Holt and another line at Liverpool.

The Hamburg American and North German Lloyd lines have signed the agreement for higher wages, and the American line is paring the scale.

The Atlantic transport steamship Marquette sailed from Antwerp for Boston with an ample crew. One hour before the Marquette sailed the firemen walked off the steamer in a body. Their places were taken by new men.

Cables to-day say the strike has spread to the dock workers in the cities of Glasgow, Southampton and Goole, and to the Albert Docks in London.

$10,000 PUZZLE CONTEST PRIZES

"If you have brains, prepare to use them now."

Mark Antony didn't say quite that when he spoke the last kind words over J. Cæsar.

But this modern form is just the description of the new proverb contest which the AMERICAN is inaugurating.

This new contest will stimulate your brains. It will tickle your fancy. It will drive dull care away. It will give you a little fascinating Summer diversion during the pleasant Summer evenings and especially in vacation.

This proverb contest invites candidates to find the nearest correct solutions of a series of seventy-five puzzle pictures. These pictures will be published, beginning next Sunday, one each day.

But this contest is not for fun alone. There are rewards offered in the form of 1,000 prizes, worth an aggregate value of $10,000.

The first prize, for instance, is a $2,500 seashore bungalow, with the title to it all guaranteed by the Massachusetts Title Insurance Company. Other prizes include high-grade runabout automobiles, motor boats, pianos, motor cycles, a graphophone, canoes, tennis outfits, diamond rings and other good things. These are prizes everyone wants. There's not a trifling one among them.

Remember that the first puzzle picture comes next Sunday. If you have not made arrangements to get your Sunday AMERICAN, do so now. There will be keen demand for them.

REPORT GOVERNOR FOSS IS READY TO VETO THE 50-YEAR 'L' LEASE BILL

The Boston Elevated omnibus bill, should it pass the Legislature in the form that would give the company fifty-year leases of subways and tunnels will be vetoed by Governor Foss, it was reported at the State House to-day.

The Governor, although he has not committed himself by any definite statement, is said to favor terminating the leases at the end of twenty-five years, and according to report it has been intimated to the Elevated that it would be better for the street railway interests to compromise before the bill reaches the Governor's office.

The Tinkham substitute bills, separating the consolidation and the lease issues and limiting the leasing of tunnels and subways to twenty-five years, will be presented to the Senate on Monday. There will undoubtedly be a bitter fight by the advocates of the original omnibus bill, but it was apparent to-day that the opposition is constantly gaining strength.

Tinkham Assured of Support.

"I have been assured," said Senator Tinkham "that the measures which I have introduced will receive the backing of many of my colleagues in the Legislature. I hope that the two bills will be carefully studied. Nothing in the Legislature is so important to-day as the solution of this important traction question. Not only does the proper development of Boston depend upon it, but the burdens to be paid by a coming generation are to be settled. The measures which I have introduced are intended to be protective as well as progressive in the sense that they give ample opportunity for something to be done.

"So far as a twenty-five year lease or a fifty-year lease or a right to an arbitrated extension of a lease after twenty-five years of our public owned subways and tunnels are concerned, I believe that the present generation should not bind future generations, or prescribe their contract terms. As the location in the public streets and highways of the Commonwealth of all public service corporations are revocable at will by the local authorities to every city and town, yet from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 has been invested by the public under these conditions. The argument for a long lease in order to secure capital is insincere and untrue. If the honest public service corporation will treat the honest public honestly it will receive honest treatment."

Luce Favors Short Lease.

Former Representative Robert Luce said:

"Only fourteen years have passed since what is called the compact of the State with the Boston Elevated was made in 1897, and already there have been found grave occasions for changing its terms. If after fourteen years both the State and the company have found it advisable to change that compact, how vital it is to suppose that for the next forty or fifty years there would be no occasion to change whatever bargain is made now.

"One generation should not tie up another, and for the same reasons that Governor Crane vetoed the bill during his term of office, I believe that no public service corporation should be given exclusive rights beyond the ordinary life time.

"All those who have seriously investigated the terms of the proposed merger of West End common stock into Boston Elevated stock, except a part of the West End stockholders, have declared that 7 per cent is their just dividend. It is to be doubted if the prejudiced views of some of the West End stockholders will be permitted to stand in the way of the consolidation of the two systems with all the advantages it offers to both the public and the corporation themselves."

Bennett's Mind Unchanged.

Senator Bennett, chairman of the street Railway Committee, who is in charge of the bill, said that he saw no reason for departing from the report of his committee simply because another Senator had offered other measures.

"The committees worked with great care upon this matter and the so-called omnibus bill is the result of their labors," said the Senator. "I believe and hope that all the members of the committee who have recorded in favor of the bill will continue to support it.

"At this time I have no comment to make about any other measure except to say that it does not seem to me adequate for the situation as the bill which contemplates the solution of a complex problem. I do not know whether anything could be accomplished under the Tinkham bills or not."

SAVES CHILD'S LIFE, BUT WRECKS AUTO

NORTH ABINGTON, June 16.—In an effort to escape running down a small child, Dr. R. B. Rand drove his automobile into a pile of rocks at West Abington this morning, wrecking the car and severely injuring himself.

While he was on Randolph street the small son of A. L. Ladd of West Abington, who was playing at the edge of the thoroughfare, ran suddenly in front of the approaching automobile. Dr. Rand had barely time to turn the machine aside.

The wheels narrowly missed the child and the car brought up with great force against a pile of rocks at the side of the street. Dr. Rand was thrown out and received a fracture of one rib. He was removed to his home on Adams street, North Abington, where he is resting comfortably. The child escaped injury.

WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO; DRIVER HELD

WORCESTER, June 16.—Mary Loughlin, twenty-six, was instantly killed by being run down by an automobile at Blair avenue and Main street. The auto is owned and was operated by H. F. Crosby of Brookfield. With two women and a man, he was bound for the Worcester Academy commencement exercises. Miss Loughlin was crossing the street to take a trolley car. The police arrested Mr. Crosby and he was taken to the police station charged with manslaughter. Later he was released on $1,000 bail.

$60,000 A YEAR TO RETIRE VETERANS

Commissioner of Public Works Rourke has notified Mayor Fitzgerald that it will cost the city about $60,000 a year to retire the 130 veterans in his department who were found by the department to be physically incapacitated for duty. He said, however, that he expects to show an actual saving in his department as the result of the retiring of these men. These men now receive a salary of $120,000 a year.

ALL STEAMSHIPS ON OCEAN MUST HAVE WIRELESS

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Ocean steamships carrying fifty or more persons between ports more than 200 miles apart must, after July 1, carry wireless equipment and an operator. Regulations governing the apparatus and operations have been prepared by the Bureau of Navigation. They provide for an examination of operators, the enforcement of the law by custom officers and inspection. The act requires that vessels be equipped with "radio-communication in good working order in charge of a person skilled in use of such apparatus."

WORK ON MAINE REVEALING HULL

HAVANA, June 16.—To-day ten feet of the upper works of the battleship Maine were visible. The engineers believe that enough water can be pumped out of the vessel in three or four days to render possible an exploration of those portions of the ship where several bodies are likely to be recovered.

That the havoc wrought by the explosion is far greater than was at first supposed was revealed through the lowering of the water level in the coffer-dam a total depth of seven feet, exposing to view the shattered hull, upheaved decks, twisted smokestacks and other evidences of the terrific character of the explosion which sent the battleship to the bottom of the harbor, all plans heretofore proposed for dealing with the intimate removal of the hulk have become merely contectural until a considerably greater amount of water has been pumped out. As the water recedes every successive foot reveals worse and worse conditions in that part of the hull forward of the midships which was subjected to the main explosion.

The bow section is still nearly twenty feet below the surface, and how it is believed the destruction will be found to have been even more complete.

POSSE HUNTS BOSTON YEGG

PLYMOUTH, N. H., June 16.—Word was received here to-day that one of the yeggmen who broke open a safe and robbed the Woonsocket Company, a bank and trust company, of $5,000 in cash, was in custody, search of the woods for the other Boston bandit was continued to-day. The company has offered a reward of $500 for the man who brings him in dead or alive, dead, preferably, and railroad stations are guarded by armed men.

John Howard, who was employed as night watchman at the Vesaey mills, gave the alarm and has been given by Mrs. Alice Hood, the cashier, and a clerk who was in the office, proved to be staid and courageous. While the bandits robbed the safe of $5,000 they made away with $5,000 more which had been timed half an hour before and would have been $10,000 in the safe instead of only $5,000.

The Vesaey mills are fifteen miles from Plymouth and one mile from the village of Thornton railroad station. As it was generally rumored in Mrs. Hood was employed by a man wearing a false mustache and goatee, who obtained a position there and demanded what money she had. Mrs. Hood was balancing the cash previous to making up the payroll, and had $15,000 on the till. This she handed over. A second man then came upon the scene after the money for the payroll.

She told the robber that it had not yet arrived. "You lie!" he said. "Throw up your hands." He then passed to the safe and went through it, but found no money. The night watchman entered the office and while one robber confronted him and the other covered Jesse Kendall, the clerk, in the safe. The alarm was given by Mrs. Hood and Kendall subsequently before the robbers were out of sight. The 200 employes of the mill immediately formed a posse and started after the men.

John Waters and Bernard Bancombe discovered the yeggs and opened fire. How and fell with a shot in his leg and was captured by Deputy Sheriff Joseph P. Buckius and Chief of Police Felix McCarthy.

Howard said that his companion, who is at large, gave his name as Charles Davis of No. 48 Waltham street, Boston, but that he saw a letter in his room addressed to Robert A. Saunders. Saunders was the name of the merchant cook in the Vesaey camp last Winter.

CHEER GALVIN AT BOYLE MEETING

C. O'Connell Galvin, the Sunday AMERICAN'S special commissioner to Ireland, whose letters are being so widely read, was called upon to address a meeting held at Boyle, Ireland, under the auspices of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. He received a very cordial greeting and the remarks called forth much cheering, according to the report of the Boyle Weekly Freeman. The following is an excerpt from the Freeman's report:

Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin, Boston, special commissioner to Ireland from the Boston Sunday AMERICAN, next addressed the meeting and received a very cordial greeting. He said he was proud to be present at the first meeting held in the United States ever had citizens of the United States present. Thousands of Irishmen were present at the meeting and from the manner in which the utterances of Ron Connon throughout the country were received by the people he was glad that their countrymen at home were able to deal with that same leader of the Irish democracy. Mr. Galvin then proceeded to read and listen to his able exposition of the Irish question.

He said only to say that he felt glad that he had been asked to speak at the home of her long-distance sister, Nationalists. He was glad to see that America featured with all other nations that their country was under the heel of the tyrant, and that they would keep the flag of National unity flying, and that John Redmond would be their great leader. John Redmond deserves John Dillon deserves. Joseph Devlin deserves and the rest of the Irish Party deserves and was the combination of the virtuous world for his splendid manner in which they had conducted this the greatest constitutional movement the world had ever seen at their country's cause.

An unusually interesting installment of Mr. Galvin's letters from Ireland will be printed in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

REGARDS HIS CURE AS A MIRACLE

This Illinois Man Had Stomach Trouble and Was Becoming Paralyzed.

Mr. J. F. Bennington, of Dallas City, Ill., regards his cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a miracle. He is well known both at Stronghurst, Ill., where he formerly resided, and at La Harpe. For years he has been recommending the pills that cured him. He says:

"My stomach trouble, which afflicted me for about two years, began with a general weakness. I didn't have strength enough to hold up my head and could eat nothing but lactated food for over six months, while I was more than a year before I could eat any solid food. I had palpitation of the heart, and my breath was short. My left leg and hand gradually became numb, and I could not use either for a long time. At first my hand felt full of needles when I closed it, afterwards there was no feeling in it at all. I had many sleepless nights and suffered intensely.

"I doctored at Stronghurst and La Harpe and had two specialists from Chicago, but there wasn't one among the doctors who could tell what my trouble was, and their treatments did not help me. My brothers moved me to La Harpe from Stronghurst during my sickness, but I had no hopes of ever getting well. I took electric treatment without any help and many medicines with no better result. My home doctor came to see me one morning after he had been treating me for three months and told me that he couldn't do any more for me, and that I ought to go to the Springs. But as I couldn't sit up or walk I kept on trying different doctors for eighteen months. When one is sick someone always suggests a remedy, and in my case an old lady friend recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to try them. I took them for two weeks, carefully following the directions, and at the end of that time began to crave a good meal. My hand and leg got so that I could use them again. I gradually regained my health and weight and have worked as ever from that time. I haven't missed work on account of sickness but two or three days in the last nine or ten years. My cure was certainly a miracle, as all my friends and relatives expected to hear of my death."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Not Salts, Oil or Pills But 'Cascarets'

No odds how sick your Stomach; how hard your head aches or how Bilious—Cascarets make you feel great.

Cascarets act as a bowel tonic, not as an irritant. They are vegetable. Their action is natural. Their effect is the same as the effect of some foods. They are gentle; no griping. They are pleasant; no dreading. They are convenient; no waiting.

One old way was castor oil. The effect was to grease the bowels, and for a single day. Oil never causes the bowel muscles to act. Other ways were pills, salts and cathartics. The effect was the same as pepper in the nostrils. They flooded the bowels with fluid. Those fluids were digestive juices. And the waste to-day means a lack to-morrow.

We knew that the method was wrong. That the after-effects only weakened the bowels. But we had no gentle laxative in the old days. So we waited as Jong as we could, then took a big dose of physic. The method to-day is to take one Cascaret at a time—just as soon as you need it. Then the bowels are always clean. They cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store.

By R. W. LARDNER.

Cy Young, the hero of many a Boston victory, will pitch against the Red Sox this afternoon in the fourth of the home series. This was the announcement made by Manager Speaker after yesterday's game. It was the Sox leader's original scheme to save Cy for the holiday engagement, but something caused him to change his mind.

As many of Boston's fans as can get away from their regular places of business will turn out to see the grand old man battle against his old teammates. Cy is one of the most popular players ever worn by a Boston uniform and the "fungs," hard as they are always pulling for a Red Sox victory, won't take a defeat from him with a frown.

Cy will probably be opposed by Eddie Cicotte, although there is a chance that Ray Collins will be given another inning.

The Sox have taken two straight from the Clevelanders and are extremely desirous of making it three, for even breaks seems them nearer to the top.

The Browns have two more battles scheduled in Pittsburg. The third one of the set is on today's program and as a win is are naturally anxious to cop it for their showing on this trip has been so good that it cannot be improved by another victory or two.

WAGNER OFFER OF $10,000 TURNED DOWN BY JOHN I. TAYLOR

Hugh Duffy has come and gone and Heinie Wagner is still a Red Sox. Hughey tried hard enough to get him, but the player and things he offered in exchange were not to the liking of J. I. Taylor and P. J. Donovan.

When Roy Cochran was hurt over in New York, Mr. Duffy informed his chief, President Comiskey of the Chicago team, that a shortstop was needed and needed badly. Following up Mr. Comiskey's tip, Hugh dropped everything and hike to Boston. Duffy left the White Sox in charge of Harry Lord and came hither and for three days talked with the bosses of the Red Sox.

Chicago was willing to take Bill Carrigan, but the man it wanted most was Wagner. Propositions and counter propositions were made, Comiskey expressing his willingness to part with $10,000 cold cash for the German shortstopper. But President Taylor thought he could worry along through the Summer with the Dutch talent in at the gate, and the players Chicago was willing to give up didn't look good to him. So, after many telegraphic conversations with Comiskey, Duffy gave it up and expressed his intention of going back to Philadelphia, where his club is now pastiming. "Boston wanted all the best of it," said he. "We made offers that were perfectly fair, but the people here seemed to think they were in danger of being stung.

No Decent Offer.

"Nobody has come across with a really decent offer for Wagner," says John I. "Several clubs are after him. I'm willing to trade almost any man on my ball club if I think I can benefit the team by so doing. But Chicago and the rest of them want too much for me little."

And then matters stand at the present writing. Wagner will stay here until the other clubs loosen up. He won't be sold for cash, but he will be let go if Boston can get some good athletes or one star in exchange. In the meantime, the Sox will go on batting Cleveland which seems to be one of the best things they do.

Even with Neal Ball substituting for Ivan Lajoie, the Cleveland infield looks pretty good. George Stovall is playing just as well as he did before the cares of the management were tossed onto his shoulders. George is a first baseman who is usually overlooked when the good ones are named. He is not particularly brilliant, but he's better than a lot of other big leaguers who are drawing money for holding down that job. And Stovall can hit that baseball.

Ball is busy demonstrating that it was a mistake to send him to the minors. This young man signed his professional career at Kalamazoo, Mich., and then was shipped to the Southern League, where he performed wonderfully. The New York Yanks had him next. Cleveland tried to release him to Toledo this Spring and he went there, but American Association company wasn't fast enough for him, and now he was back on the job with the Naps. He looks like a pretty good second baseman, and he has been swatting some, too. His original position was shortstop and the switch may account for his big improvement.

In Ivan Olson, the Pacific Coast recruit, the Naps seem to have one of the finds of the year. He is a tall, rangy person and he covers all kinds of ground. The line drives in this position are in the majority, but some of the big ones. Home Wagner, Babe Ruth and Mike Donlin, for example, appear to do the work just as satisfactorily.

Another Strikeout.

LEE IN SHAPE FOR DELMONT

Tonight is the night that Kid Lee the clever little Chelsea bantamweight, and Albert Delmont, one of the best bantamweights in the country, meet in their 12-round bout at the Lowell Social and Athletic Club. The fans from the Mill City are all primed up for a rattling go from the boxers and of this there appears to be no doubt as both boys are in perfect boxing trim ready to set a fast pace.

Lee has been boxing with Johnny Glover, the clever South Boston lightweight, and the latter reports that Lee is boxing in wonderfully good form. Glover will accompany Lee for the bout tonight and will be his chief second.

Delmont has prepared for the bout with painstaking care as he realizes that in Lee he is meeting one of the greatest little men in his class. The North End boxer appears to have the call, but one thing is sure he will know that he has been boxing before he gets through with Lee as the latter has promised to box his fastest from the tap of the gong and will make the attempt of his career to win this contest.

A strong set of preliminaries has been arranged and the entertainment promises to be an interesting one all the way through.

ATHLETIC EVENTS ON ST. JOSEPH'S DAY

Entry blanks for the ten and three-mile races which will be a feature of the St. Joseph's Field Day at Pinehurst Park, Worcester, Saturday, can be had by writing to John E. Hauser, No. 203 Brewer street, Worcester, or from J. Frank Facey. The ten-mile race is open to all, while the three-mile race is open to boys of Worcester county only. Both of these events will be run under the sanction of the N. E. A. A. U.

FIGHTER BREAKS ARM.

NEWPORT, R. I. June 16.—Jack Moore of the Naval Training Station here, who was to have boxed ten rounds with Kid Willette of Fall River here, before the Perry Athletic Club, broke his left arm in the second round. Moore had a little the better of it in the first round, and in the second he crossed Willette in such a way that his arm between the wrist and elbow struck Willette's elbow and one of the bones snapped.

ONE BIG NIGHT IN ABINGTON

There was some time in Abington and Whitman last night when the student body of the Abington High School celebrated their baseball victory in the league composed of Rockland, Whitman and Abington. Abington and Whitman were tied for honors till the former won yesterday's game by 9 to 4.

A procession was started near the high school with several hundred in line, including the greater part of the girls. The line marched to Centre Abington, where a bonfire greeted them and the old double-barrelled gun of "Cliff" Nash rang out. Cheers were given the players collectively and individually, but Mike Driscoll and Captain Crowley were the "beats."

The parade, headed by several musical instruments and red lights, then marched to Whitman, the losing town, and gave them a visit and more cheers and songs rang out. Other jollities were indulged in and it was nearly midnight when the crowd subsided. The girls played an important part in the celebration and they stuck till the end.

BOAT BUILDERS AND SOCIAL CLUB MEET

Great interest is being manifested to the game between the Orchard Social and the Lawley boat builders nine of Neponset, which will be played Bunker Hill day morning at the McNary playgrounds, South Boston. "Kicky" Lynch will do the box work for the Orchards with Francis Shea on the receiving end. Moriarty will do the twirling for the Lawley aggregation and promises to make it hot going for the Orchards. Hank Evans, formerly of Jordan Marsh, will out up things in the outfield for the Orchards.

WAGNER-TROTT DRAW.

AKRON, O., June 16.—Billy Wagner of Chicago and Sammy Trott of Columbus fought fifteen rounds to a draw here. Both men mixed things freely in each of the rounds and at the end were working for a knockout.

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Capt. Kling will lead his men onto the field again this afternoon determined to win another victory. Yesterday's win was a great encouragement to the visitors after so many losses. Kling rallied his men and did during the game and his head work was largely responsible for the triumph. Wagner was steadied very much by the veteran backstop and several times that he was tempted to go flying he was brought back to terra firma by the other end of the battery.

The Rustlers are out to repeat their victory to-day.

Roy Miller was the hero of the game. The fact that the Rustlers never know when they are beaten is responsible for the win. They stick to the game until the finish and yesterday's was but one of several they have won at the last hour.

The score was 6 to 2 in favor of the locals when the Rustlers took their half of the eighth. Spratt had been sent in to bat for Young and he promptly doubled to left. Weaver singled to right, but Wilson threw nobly and at the plate. Sweeney and Tenney both singled, filling the bases. Clarke rapped Hendrix and sophisticated him by sending Adams to the mound. Herzog walked, forcing Weaver, across the plate. Miller lined out a triple, scoring Sweeney, Tenney and Herzog across the pan, and scored the winning run himself on Ingerton's long fly.

SOMERVILLES MEET ALL-STARS TO-MORROW

What promises to be one of the best game of the season is scheduled for to-morrow afternoon on the City Field, Somerville, when the All-Stars of Everett and the Somerville B. B. team clash. Manager Allen of the All-Stars has his boys out every night for a workout.

"Chuck" Bowen will probably do the twirling for the home team, while Barney Hagen, the boy with the wallop, will endeavor to keep up his regular Saturday afternoon performance of knocking the ball down to the pumping station.

Manager Grimmon, Eddie Hagan and Jim Corbin are some of the stars who comprise the Somerville team. The game will be preceded by a concert by the band connected with the local club.

JIM JEFFRIES MAY MEET JACK JOHNSON

PARIS, June 16.—"It isn't because Jack Johnson is in London, but because I hate crowds that I am not going there for the coronation," said James J. Jeffries, the vanquished heavyweight champion, to-day. Jeffries and his party arrived yesterday. "I may meet Johnson before I return, continued Jeffries. "I feel no ill will toward him."

WILSON SOLD BY TROY.

TROY, June 16.—Pitcher Peter Wilson of the Troy State League team was sold to the Hartford team of the Connecticut League. The price has not been made public. Wilson started his baseball career with Hartford and was later drafted into the New York Americans. Later he went to Montreal and was purchased by the Troy Club.

WEATHER STOPS SPEED TRIALS

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Ct., June 16.—A combination of adverse weather conditions and the absence of Voorhees, the varsity four coxswain, yesterday, prevented Harvard crews of knowing just how fast they could go over the course, as all the crews were scheduled to go over on time, their respective distances.

About 4 o'clock the two varsity fours lined up at the opposite bank near Berlietts, for a trial, the first four starting at thirty-four strokes, then dropped to thirty-two and pulled away from the second. At the mile mark the freshman four went in the race for the second mile, when the varsity four again raised their stroke and passed the freshmen, winning by about a length, the second varsity being in the rear a bad third.

A little after 6 the two eights also lined up for their row, but a sudden squall from the southwest kicked up such a sea that the attempt to go over the course at fast time was useless, so Coach Wray ordered a paddle for both crews down to the two and half mile mark.

The morning's work was very light, each crew having a half mile sprint opposite the quarters, the varsity time as given out was 2m., 30s., which, under the conditions, was good.

The only changes yesterday was that of the first four. Abels of the second go into the first as coxswain, on account of the absence of Voorhees who was called to his home suddenly.

Dr. W. E. Lodd, '02, arrived at the quarters yesterday and will remain until the race.

SEND YOUR OPINION OF THE BALL TRADE

Have you sent in your opinion on the Boston-Cub trade yet?

No? Well you are one of the few, for the letters are coming in by the hundred. You know just as much about baseball as any of the other thousands of AMERICAN readers. You need $10 just as much as the rest of them. Here is a chance to get the $10 easy. Just write the answer to this question and if it is the best one the yellow buck is yours.

Who got the best of the deal? The deal by which Graham, Goode, Curtis and Cullins went to Chicago and Kling, Weaver, Kaiser and Griffin came to Boston.

Just keep this in mind. Most of the fans think that Boston got the short end. Manager Dooin of the Phillies say that the trade benefits Boston more than it does Chicago.

And listen to this. Russell and Tenney think so much of Kling and his baseball brains that they have made him captain of the Bruins.

Now all you fans get busy, don't be influenced by what you read and hear. Just think for yourself and send your opinion to the Baseball Trade Editor of the AMERICAN.

Here are a few samples of what some of the other fans think.

Baseball Trade Editor:

In regard to the Chicago and Boston deal I think that Boston got the best of the bargain. Kling is the catcher, there is none better in the business. He is the best man in the league to work to the pitcher. He is better than Fred Graham. He is as good if not better and more valuable than three other men.

A catcher has one of the hardest positions on the team, having to face the pitcher and the man. The other three men, who are Graham, Goode and Curtis, are the best of the Chicago team. Hence Chicago is a good deal better off for the loss of Kling. Another reason is John Kling, as he is going to play in Boston this year. He is a good fielder, catcher. Hoping to hear from you soon.

H. W. Newport, R. I.

Baseball Trade Editor:

Chicago got the better of the deal in my estimation. Because one "Peaches" is worth more than four lemons handed to the Boston fans.

W. R. L. Cambridge.

Baseball Trade Editor:

The thousand dollar "Peaches for a deal" one and three times. And a present on the side. Peaches pitches and Chicago catches he's in again.

When Tenney made that trade, what did Tennyson?

W. F. H., Beachmont.

Baseball Trade Editor:

The Cubs got the best of the trade. They proved they were good judges of fruit as well as players. They took "Peaches" and brought on a moon. Kling is not a good player while Graham is. The balance of the trade is a standoff.

D. H. H., Newton Centre.

Baseball Trade Editor:

I think Chicago got the best of the baseball trade, taking from the playing standpoint, otherwise the deal wouldn't have gone through. The management of the Cubs unreasonably wouldn't weaken their team when the pennant race is so close, and to get rid of players aren't much good these days was one more argument for them.

G. E. Quincy.

Baseball Trade Editor:

Chicago got the best of the deal. Graham alone being worth the four players Boston got. Goode, Cullins and Curtis are given as a present. Kling is going back. Kaiser and Weaver are lemons and Griffin will soon get his. Chicago has strengthened its team but by no steal.

J. P. P., Somerville.

WOMEN WATCH SIX-ROUND BOUT

LANCASTER, Pa., June 16.—Witnessed by 3,000 people, including many women, the opening boxing show was held at Baseball Park. Leo Houck, the New York lad, demonstrated his superiority over Joe Thomas of California, ex-middleweight champion. Houck was obliged to go mixed of the leading. Thomas weighing it less than half a dozen times during the entire six rounds.

He appeared to have a dread of Leo's gruelling ability on the infighting and kept covering his body continually, leaving his head exposed, until Houck began belting in his ugly left jabs, when he gave his head better protection.

Leo drove Joe to the ropes a dozen times but was prevented from pushing Thomas to the limit by the California's clinching tactics.

In the opening round Thomas managed to get in a stiff right to Houck's jaw and was rewarded with two wicked left jabs to the jaw in return. In the fourth round Joe tried and missed a wicked uppercut.

The fifth opened with Joe and Houck's rushes and he landed four stiff jabs in quick succession on Joe's jaw, causing his head to rock like a cradle. He then drove Thomas to the ropes and plugged him right and left to the body until stopped by the bell.

In the final round Houck pounded Joe all over the ring, but the Californian showed himself from harm by frequent clinching.

2 BIG BOUTS ON COLUMBIA MAT

As the wrestling season nears its close interest in the game seems to increase rather than diminish as is demonstrated by the enormous crowds that have attended the series of special cards at the Columbia. The offering for to-night is fully up to, or rather in advance of, the high standard set on previous occasions, for it includes two finish matches between men of top-notch calibre, one of the battles being for the middleweight championship of New England.

Stranger Leslie, who is on his way to London to compete in the annual tournament, is matched with Cyclone Burns, and the Western terror will have a chance to show us what he can do against the conqueror of Parolli and Willoughby. He has quite a reputation as a savage, but the Cyclone is used to taming the wild ones. This match should be on a par with the Baros-Perolli go of last week.

Sam Anderson of Norwood and Jim Prokos, the Greek, will battle for the middleweight championship of New England and the belt now held by the former. These two men are at home to all sorts of going, being here with the clever work as well as speed and rough stuff on occasion, and their bout should contain a little of everything. The fact that they went an hour without a fall last week, finishing up in a most sensational manner, shows that they are well matched and in condition to put up a grand good battle.

Dr. McFarland has ordered a rest for Russell. Meanwhile Connie Mack has recalled the waivers he asked on Russell and will retain the lefty until he has a chance to work him out with his arm in shape.

It is no secret that Mr. Smith on behalf of Mr. Crabtree, offered Mott a figure that will where the $1,000 mark for Russell Coline and it is said, that he raised that figure several hundreds in a bid for Palm Beauty. Myron McHenry when interviewed expressed the opinion to Mr. Smith, after he had seen Russell Coline race on Tuesday that "he is a wonderfully fast gaited horse."

TOM McNAMARA

To tell the truth, there was no real three star first class news floating around the neighborhood yesterday, except a little loose talk about "Puggy" Mullane's "Great Unknown." Since he has appeared in our midst, it is absolutely impossible to get any one to settle down and talk straight baseball. All we heard on our own gathering tour of the neighborhood yesterday was, "Who is he? Who is he?" We heard no more of this idle chatter that we got disgusted trying to get baseball dope, and gave all our reporters a day off.

It is surprising to us how many curious people there are in this world. Our neighborhood is chucked full of them and there must be a few in other neighborhoods, though we cannot say that from personal observation.

We were all settled down to a nice little series of three games between two tail-end teams, "Shrimp" Flynn, of the Wild Cats, started things by signing up "Eagle Beak" Spender, the marvellous pill twister, lately connected with the Starfish Giants, the team which up to a week ago led the league owing to "Eagle Beak's" pitching. As soon as we heard that "Eagle Beak" had been signed up, we said to ourselves: "Well, if he pitches there will be nothing to it but the Wild Cats, the Wasps will be swamped."

We had the Wild Cats picked for sure winners under these circumstances. We forgot to reckon on "Puggy" Mullane, the captain of the Wasps. He must have been figuring about the same as us, for it appears that he was all prepared for "Eagle Beak," having signed up this "Great Unknown" whom we have heard so much and yet so little about.

As the entire baseball world knows, "Eagle Beak" did not pitch in that last game. That is the way all the excitement started. As soon as "Puggy" Mullane saw "Eagle Beak" pulled off the field by his kid sister to go home and pick straw-berries, he figured that "Lefty" McClusky, the pitcher who took his place, was easy.

Consequently he did not use his "Great Unknown." He did not even take the flour sack off him. Nobody has the slightest idea as to who he is, except "Puggy" Mullane, but he is like a clam.

Of course some little kids are trying to boist into the limelight on this deal. Kid Hash says he knows who this mysterious player of "Puggy's" is and will tell anybody who treats him to an ice cream soda, but we are on to Kid Hash all right. All he wants is an ice cream soda and a little publicity.

We will admit that our curiosity has been aroused just a wee bit. We are going to try and unravel this mystery about the "Great Unknown." We make no promise, but if we happen to do it this afternoon we will have full reports in tomorrow's paper.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

In Which Warren Arrives and Realizes That Helen Is Very Ill.

THE sound of grating wheels on the driveway in the yard below! It was Warren. Helen had risen on her elbow, and then, through sheer weakness, fell back among the pillows.

In the still night air every sound came through her open window—the purr, murmur of voices, the steps on the porch and the slamming of the screen door. Warren had come. In a few moments he would be there beside her!

Still dazed from the quieting potion they had given her after her excited outbreak on learning Warren had been sent for without her knowledge, Helen gazed about the room with a strange sense of unreality. Everything seemed curiously unreal—the room, the black night outside the window, the murmuring sound of voices downstairs, one of which she knew was Warren's.

She waited, with a sort of apathy, for them to bring him to her. At that moment she seemed void of any feeling.

Something trickled down her face. She put her hand to her head and found an icepack there.

"Yes, He's Downstairs." He Said

Not once, since she had been ill had Helen realized how very ill she was, nor did she now know that the curious sense of remoteness, of unreality, that had come over her was only the stupor of the fever.

But, as she felt her forehead burning with heat even under the ice, she was conscious of a vague satisfaction. At least Warren would see that she was ill—that he had not been sent for without cause.

Her eyes closed, she was becoming strangely drowsy again. Then, at the sound of someone beside her, she looked up. It was her father.

"Is Warren here?" she seemed hardly able to form the words.

"Yes, he is downstairs. I am going to let him come up in a moment. Dr. Davis is here, too, and I want him to see you first."

Helen's only answer was to close her eyes. The languor that was slowly claiming her deepened. She did not notice the increased anxiety in her father's voice and face. She was conscious only of an utter weariness, against which she could no longer struggle.

Dr. Davis was in the room now—and her mother. She seemed to feel that Warren was at the door, but it all seemed part of a dream—the low murmur of voices, the moving softly about, the distant barking of a dog. Nothing was clear or distinct.

The glint of a shining hypodermic—then a quick, sharp pain in her arm. She moaned and turned uneasily.

Was it part of the dream or was it really Warren's voice that cried: "Helen! Helen!"

* * *

It was two days before Helen regained consciousness. As it was again night, her first thought was that she had been asleep. The shaded light still burned beside the bed, and the white muslin curtains still fluttered out in the night air. And Warren—Warren—must be still down stairs? Had they not brought him to her yet?

Then, as she gazed about the room, she was puzzled by many changes. Her bed had been moved away from the wall. A cot was on the other side of the room by the window. There were many more bottles and glasses on the stand by her bed. The gown she had on was not the same. Then, she remembered, had been trimmed with lace and blue ribbon, and this was embroidered. What had happened? How could all of these changes have been made while she slept?

The White-Gowned Nurse

And then, as she stirred, a white-gowned nurse, who had been sitting on the other side of the bed, bent over her. Helen stared at her, bewildered. The nurse smiled reassuringly.

"You are all right now, aren't you?"

"But how—what has happened? Where is mother?"

"Your mother is asleep. Shall I call her? She's been up two nights with you, and I told her she must rest tonight."

Slowly it was all dawning on Helen. So she had been unconscious for two nights!

"And Warren—my husband?" she faltered.

"He's downstairs. I'll go for him. I was to let him know as soon as there was any change."

"He—is he asleep, too?"

"Oh, no; he hasn't slept since he came; he won't even lie down. Shall I let him come up now?"

Helen nodded.

"But you mustn't talk. He can see you and stay with you for a little while, but you must promise not to talk. You're not strong enough yet."

Again Helen nodded and the nurse hurried downstairs.

Helen's heart was leaping in her throat. "He hasn't slept since he came. He won't even lie down." The nurse's words swept through her like a strong reviving tonic. And it meant that, after all, he loved her—loved her as she wanted to be loved? Or was it only remorse? Oh, no, no! She wouldn't think that! It was love—else would believe it was love.

It Was His Step

His step upon the stairs! She almost stopped breathing.

The door opened. She did not look toward him. She did not even look up. Somehow she couldn't. And then Warren was kneeling beside the bed, his arms about her. With a long, shuddering sob of peace and contentment Helen turned her face toward him.

It was one of the rare perfect moments in life sometimes gives. Whatever misunderstandings or estrangements the future might hold for them, this moment had brought them divinely near.

Scaling the Pinnacle

By KENNETT HARRIS

PEN and ink and blotter, blotter, pen and ink!
Pretty tools to work with all day long, I think.
Black ink for the debits, credits in the red;
That's the way the young man pushes up ahead.
(If he's lucky and thrifty and clever and shifty.
He'll wave quite a pile by the time he is fifty.)

Grain and pork and cotton, cotton, pork and grain!
Here be worthy studies for the young man's brain.
Work 'em into corners, jerk 'em up and down;
That's the way to make a magnate of renown.
(But he'll have a bad liver and nerves all a-quiver,
He'll care what he steals, every single last stiver.)

Mills and cents and dollars, dollars, cents and mills,
Mortgages and options, contracts, notes and bills.
None down on the grindstone, never time to spare;
Isn't it a grand thing to be a millionaire!
(He must be elated, to be celebrated,
Bowed down to, made much of, thoroughly hated!)

Bloated, bald and flabby; flabby, bloated, bald!
Snail-cooled, mean and shabby; that is what he's called.
Poverty is cruel, want is mighty grim,
Still I'd not choose riches— not to be like him.
(I would scorn, if he proffered, the coin he has coffered,
But I'm bound to admit that it hasn't been offered.)

A Successful Wife

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By G. DORSET

Copyright, 1910, by Harper & Brothers.

PART ONE—(Continued).

FANNY had eaten her supper up in her own room, and I went to see how she was getting on. She was reading a novel in bed. She looked tired out, and as though she had been crying. As soon as I came in, she said:

"See here, Esther, I'm sick of this trip. Europe's a great deal prettier and more civilized. Anyhow, I don't believe Mr. Foster (he was her employer) is ever going to get on with my substitute."

"Didn't you like the ranches?" I asked her.

"Goodness! It's awfully tame after Europe! I am ready to go home now, but I suppose we were going on to Oretown the next day, and I couldn't let her break up the party like this here." And when I bade her good-night, I said:

"If you want to go back from Oretown on Sunday night I guess we can fix it up, only your ticket is good as far as San Francisco."

"Mercy!" she exclaimed, as cross as anything. "I don't see how any one can travel West who can go to Europe. But you haven't been abroad, Esther, do you like it here?"

And I told her I thought it was a good enough place to start away from, but that I hadn't seen the ranches!

A Starting Point

Things that start away and round out into the wide, wide circles, start from the littlest specks. As I look back now, Oretown, Nevada, seems a speck to begin from, and yet Stephen's life started there.

Our train was fourteen hours late. As we got off the filthy cars we saw a horse and road, and, half a mile back, a settlement of houses which was Oretown, some fifteen miles from Gold City. How dreadfully homeless the plains can be in the Winter I learned to know. The grass had been cut, and the stubble was rough and ugly.

There was a group at the station, for the town had turned out to meet Stephen and an old hack, white with dust, with skittish horses acting like sixty. We're to drive over. Two men were awfully Western in their looks and dress, but they were very polite to Fanny and me. They were representative men, interested in the new town, the starting-point of the O. & W. N. Railroad.

My husband had come from New York to attend to the contracts. He was attending as well to the financiering of the railroad.

Just before we came to our destination the best-looking man of the party, Judge Baxfield, said:

"I had planned to receive you at my house, ladies, but I did not know that there were three of you in your party. I have only one spare room."

My husband said:

"If you are really no kind, Judge, as to want any of us, take the ladies. I can put up at the—" And he asked the name, with his eyebrows, of Mr. Madder, the editor of the Oretown News.

"First Hotel," Madder answered, "and it might be called the first and the only, because it is both."

I could see that Fanny thought the Judge good-looking. He looked clean, cheerful, and smart. He had white teeth, like new corn, and a pointed beard just turning a little bit gray. He laughed a great deal, and his voice was pleasant and Southern. I should say he was about forty years old.

A Welcome

"You don't know how proud I am, ladies! Such a pleasure as this hasn't been mine since I came to Oretown."

He didn't seem a bit embarrassed.

"It is not New York, but it is all yours from now on, and the guest-room is at the head of the stairs."

There was a colored boy at the door, with a white apron on and a face as black as ink.

Our room was big and cool. The furniture was "old Virginia Colonial," Judge Baxfield told us; when he had come to Nevada to live here he had brought his goods with him.

The other rooms upstairs were not furnished at all. That was how it happened there was only one guest-room. I learned afterward that his wife died the first year they were out here.

We stood, Fanny and I, out West—far out West—and together in the same room, as far as I could remember, for the first time in our lives.

Winter I learned to know. The grass had been cut, and the stubble was rough and ugly.

There was a group at the station, for the town had turned out to meet Stephen, and an old hack, white with dust, with skittish horses acting like sixty. We're to drive over. Two men were awfully Western in their looks and dress, but they were very polite to Fanny and me. They were representative men, interested in the new town, the starting-point of the O. & W. N. My husband had come from New York to attend to the contracts. He was attending as well to the financiering of the railroad.

Just before we came to our destination

A Feature for College Girls.

There will be a special feature for college girls in Sunday's AMERICAN, which will be of particular interest to all young women of New England. See next Sunday's AMERICAN.

"H'm! he hasn't much style. They all look like hayseeds!"

And I told her I guessed it was a good crop. Senator Bellars was from Nevada, and the State had charm for me, for I could see my sister thought I was limited because I hadn't travelled abroad.

After all, Fanny had only been once, and I've found out that it is only when you have been over several times that you learn to be quiet about it.

After the first day or two I discovered Oretown was a man's town. There were men everywhere, and Fanny flirted frightfully.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

"A Successful Wife" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this great human interest novel will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN.

How the White Rose Came

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE roses all were pink and red
Before the Bumble Bee.
A lover bold, with cloak of gold,
Came singing merrily
Along the sandy ways that led
From woodland and from tea.

He paused beside an opening rose,
The gardens' pet and pride;
She burst in flower that very hour,
While wooing zephyrs sighed;
No snile had she for one of those
And hope within them died.

The ardent Butterfly in vain
Spread truant wings over her;
The hopless moth in vain grew wroth—
The fair rose leaned to hear
The love song strained in low refrain
That thrilled upon her ear.

She gave her heart in love's delight—
And let the whole world see.
But, ah! one day, away, away,
Sped truant Bumble Bee;
'Twas then the red rose turned to white—
So was the tale told me.

The Head Waitress

By HANK

She Tells the Steady Customer Something About Dreams.

"D' YOU believe in dreams?" asked the Head Waitress of the Steady Customer in the life des Enfants Terrible.

"Why-er-sometimes," he replied. "For instance, if I dream that I'm falling off a precipice and I find myself on the floor, I am forced to believe that my dream to a certain extent was true."

"Aw, you're always kiddin'," said the Head Waitress. "Well, as I was going to tell you, I have a friend named Mrs. Van Landingham who keeps tabs on every dream she has. The other night she dreamed that her daughter was kidnaped and when she went shopping that day she locked the house up with her daughter inside."

"Ubes!" exclaimed the Steady Customer, "what would she do if she dreamt the house was burned down—move out the next day?"

"I dunno," said the Head Waitress, "but for all that I think there's something to dreams."

"You remind me of that old vaudeville joke," said the Steady Customer, "about the man who dreamt his house was burned and when he woke up he found a spring in the mattress."

"There you go with your bum jokes again," replied the Head Waitress disgustedly, "can't you talk nothin' serious? I'll bet if you was to know Mrs. Van Landingham she'd convince you that there was something in dreams. The other night she dreamed she was going to get some money, and sure enough she got a check through the mail the next day."

"My wife dreamt the same thing the other night," said the Steady Customer, "and it came true all right."

"Is that so?" asked the Head Waitress.

"Yes," he replied, "and I found all the small change missing from my trousers pockets when I woke up in the morning. I'm not partial to those kind of dreams."

"Maybe she walked in her sleep," suggested the Head Waitress.

"That's what they all say," answered the Steady Customer. "But I don't mind that so much. What I do kick at, though is when she dreams she's at a suffragette meeting."

"What happens then?" asked the Head Waitress.

"Why, she wakes her arms around in the air, and talks her head off," said the Steady Customer. "The other night she dreamt she was making a speech for women's rights, and the noise she made woke me up. I managed to get out of bed just in time to escape being soaked in the jaw during some specially terse arraignment against men. Those are the kind of dreams I believe in, but do not question."

"Outside of all that," said the Head Waitress, "don't you believe that dreams mean something?"

"Well," replied the Steady Customer, "I've heard that to dream about water means death."

"Huh," exclaimed the Head Waitress, "I believe that. From the look of some of the guys I find drunk in here, they are sure afraid of dying that way. And there are some persons I know who would die sure if they used water for a beverage."

"Present company excepted, I hope?" asked the Steady Customer anxiously.

But the Head Waitress made no reply.

Are Spirit and Thought Identical?

To many this question may seem uninteresting, if not foolish, but that question would seem infinitely more foolish to a pig dozing in his sty who might ask: "What do I care about spirit or about thought? I care about swill and the nice, soft mud." See next Sunday's AMERICAN.

SHE HAD CONSTANT PAIN

Until Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dewittville, N.Y.—"Before I started to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered nearly all the time with headaches, backaches, and bearing down pains, and had a continuous pain in my left side. It made me sick if I tried to walk much, and my back was so weak that I was obliged to wear corsets all the time, but now I do not have any of those troubles. I have a fine strong baby daughter now, which I did not have before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. A. A. CILES, Route 44, Dewittville, N. Y.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company, which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

We challenge anyone to name even one other medicine that has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Our photographer arrived on the scene just in time to get a picture of Desmond and Gemigate in their cage being pushed into the water by our brave hero, Claude Eclaire. The villain will perish miserably in the briny deep, for the iron bars of the cage will drag them down, and they have no chance to save themselves by swimming.

You'd think a great big husky animal like a whale would not be afraid of any thing that swims the salty sea, but that's of Desmond's cage, such a match for a school of swordfish, and when but anyhow, it takes their where you are mistaken. The mighty ocieacan knows in his heart he is no how this diversion is going to help them, leviathan of the deep swims away as fast he's going to make trouble for a little while, and that's as he can go, taking the cage and the rock with prisoners with him.

In backing away from his enemies, the swordfish leader of the swordfish.

With one powerful lunge, the swordfish thrusts his bill through the bars pierces the whale's caudal appendage and sends the surprised with his saw, thus pinning him fast. The whale, maddened by the excruciating pain, is threshing his tail about, and in his frantic efforts to free himself from the cage against a big rock. The bars are bent and twisted out of shape.

And we are sorry to say that the villain's hope bids fair to be realized. The cage is at the bottom of the ocean, are drinking tea in the mess tent of the circus. Little do they dream that Desmond and his savage allies are working without, their hearts filled with diabolical plans for vengeance. Wonder what they'll do in tomorrow's pictures.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

When She Tries to Dress—A Matter of Buttons

WHEN a woman appears with the fourth button from the top in the back of her waist, unbuttoned it is proof there was no other woman present when she dressed to whom she could appeal for assistance.

It is also, in a way, a sign of age, Young Things being so supple they can twist and reach the fourth button from the top without doing themselves violent physical injury.

As the years roll on, the sister buttons of the fourth button, the third and fifth buttons, also appear without any holes around them, and occasionally a woman is seen helpless, because of her years. There is a gap in her waist, in the back, that includes all the fourth button's immediate kin.

The fashion, bone guide, spiritual uplift and "making life beautiful" books, which are issued regularly for the purpose of assisting Womankind in solving the complex problems of her life, have avoided, with what seems criminal neglect, to advise a woman what to do when she is alone in the house and encounters the fourth button.

Shall she call the hall boy, the butler, brave the second next door whom she does not know, or wear her locket in the back so it will cover the fourth button, or don a shawl?

Would it be proper to ask help of the first policeman she meets on the street—policemen being public guardians?

All these questions burn themselves into Daysey Mayme Appleton's inner consciousness every time she meets the fourth button and is alone in the house, and it was with a desperate determination to meet them unafraid, to conquer the fourth button, that she dressed the other day.

Reaching her arms over her head she started downward and buttoned three buttons, and in trying to reach the fourth she knocked over a chair. Finding her arms not long enough, she tried a button-hook, and, when that failed, she used a fishhook, but caught the hook in the window curtain, pulling it to the floor.

She would approach it with a flank movement, she decided, and began buttoning upward from her waist, and found when she had fastened the fifth button from the top that she could go no further.

She turned, twisted, stooped forward and back; and, in her twisting, turning and stooping, she broke every piece of glass on her dressing table and knocked every picture off the wall.

When Mrs. Appleton returned, a few hours later, she found all the furniture in Daysey Mayme's room upset and broken, and under the debris she found Daysey Mayme tied in a knot that no world-famed contortionist has ever attained. It required the united help of all the family and three physicians to untie her.

And through all the painful proceedings that followed the fourth button from the top wore an expression of bored indifference, leaving all emotion to the button hole, which was stretched wide open as if in a laugh.

Gray Hair

Easy to Restore Natural Color to Your Hair by Simple Method.

Science has just been finding out some of the most amazing things about the hair—discovered that overtaxing mind, or body, or both, is the cause of gray hair. Discovered positive way to restore it to its original color. Discovered color is restored by a simple treatment that can be applied by any one in private home. This scientific treatment is embodied in the Queen Gray Hair Restorer, a liquid preparation that makes any desired shade from the one package, leaving the hair soft and fluffy, and making a lasting color that is not sticky and does not rub off.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, Chicago, is a substantial user of this preparation, and applies it herself to restore the natural color of your hair. It is in two sizes, one and $1.00, can be had against from Hampton & Dutton and Riker-Jayne Drug store, or in the better class stores of the leading drug and department stores throughout the country.

The best hairdressers use it and sell it to their patrons.

Itching Skin

Eczema and similar skin diseases rarely cure themselves, but grow worse from week to week until the sufferer is nearly driven mad with intense irritation. Don't waste time taking internal medicines. Get a 10c box of Cadum, the new medical compound, and apply it immediately. The itching will stop at once, and a great improvement will be noticed over night. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest soon after Cadum is applied. Cadum is also for pimples, rash, blotches, ulcers, eruptions, scaly skin, chafing, piles, etc.

When Genius Fails

EUCLID entered the stadium looking blue and discomfited.

His associates held aloof for a while, expecting the great problemist to throw off his gloomy air.

But they waited in vain.

Then they communed together and finally selected Thumyanus to approach the master.

"What is it disquiets you, great one?" quoth the messenger in the softest Peloponnesian.

Euclid looked around.

"I'll tell you, Timany," he replied, "my little girl came home from school last night and asked me to show her how to do one of her geometry problems—an', by Jinks, I couldn't do it!"

Which accounts for the mountain looking pleased.

The De Bercy Affair

TO DAY'S INSTALMENT

PART ONE—(Continued).

"I TELL you this of my sister—of one who to me is dearest on earth; and, having told you all this, is it any longer possible that I should go you done without conditions? You see, do you not, that it is impossible?"

No answer.

"I only ask you to promise—to give your simple word—not to say, or hint, to anyone that Pauline had the daggers. What a risk I take! What trust in you!

"I do not know you—I but trust blindly in the highly-evolved, that divine countenance which is yours; and since it was with the object of saving my sister that you came here with me, my gratitude to you deepens my trust. Give me, then, this promise, Miss Marsh!"

Now her lips opened a little to form the word "No," which he could just catch.

"Sublime!" he cried—"and I am no less sublime. If I was rich, if I had a fair name, and if I could dare to hope to win the love of a lady such as you, how devoured of the gods I should be! But that is—a dream.

"Here, then, you will remain, until the day that Pauline is safely hidden in France; and on that day—since for myself I care little—I will open this door to you never before. Meanwhile, tell me if you think of anything more that I can do for your comfort."

Heard a Step

No answer.

"Good-night." He turned to go.

"You made me a promise," she said at the last moment.

"I have kept it," he said. "This afternoon, at great risk to myself, I wrote to your mother the words: 'Your daughter is alive and safe.' Are you satisfied?"

"Good-night," he murmured again.

Having locked the door, he waited five minutes outside silently, to hear if she sobbed or walked in there in the utter dark; but no sound came to him.

He went upstairs, put out the light, put down the candlestick in the passage, and was just drawing back the door latch, when he was aware of a figure softly marching quickly along an almost deserted pavement.

After a little he peeped out and recognized the heavy figure of Inspector Winter. Even Janoc, the dreamer, whose dreams took such tragic shape, was surprised for an instant.

"How limited is the consciousness of man!" he muttered. "That so-called clever detective little guesses what he has just passed by."

But Winter, too, might have indulged in the same reflection: "How limited the consciousness of Janoc! He doesn't know where I am guessing to—to visit and question his sister Paulina!"

Winter, a little further on, took a taxicab to Porchester Gardens, got out at the bottom of the street, and was walking on to Mrs. Marsh's temporary residence, when he saw Furneaux coming the opposite way.

Winter wished to pretend not to see him, but Furneaux spoke.

"Well, Providence throws us together somehow?"

"Ah! Why blame Providence?" said Winter, with rather a snarl.

"Not two hours ago there was our chance meeting by that graveside——"

The "chance" irritated Winter to the quick.

"You have all the faults of the French nature," he said bitterly, "without any of its merits: its brevity without its brilliancy, its pettiness without its minuteness——"

"And you the English frankness without its honesty. The chief thing about a Frenchman is his intelligence. At least you do not deny that I am intelligent?"

"I have thought you intelligent. I am damned if I think you so any longer."

"Oh, you will again—soon—when I wish it. We met just now at a grave, and there was more buried in that grave than the grave-diggers know: and we both stood looking at it: but I fancy there were more X-rays in my eye to see what was buried there than in yours!"

Beyond Patience.

Driven beyond the bounds of patience, Winter threw out an arm in angry protest.

"Ha! ha! ha!" tittered Furneaux.

An important official at Scotland Yard must learn early the value of self-control. Consumed with a certain sense of the monstrous in this display of untimely mirth, Winter only gnawed a bristle or two of his mustache.

He looked eagerly at Furneaux, and they lingered together, loath to part, having still something bitter and rankling to say, but not knowing quite what, since each grew conscious that it should be rude other cannot quarrel without some childish tone of schoolboy spite mingling in the affray.

"I believe I know where you are going now!" jeered Furneaux.

"Ah, you were always good at guessing."

"Going to pump the Pauline girl about Miss Marsh."

"True, of course, but not a very profound analysis considering that I am just ten yards from the house."

"Don't you even know where Miss Rose Bud Marsh is?" asked Furneaux, producing a broken cigar from a pocket and sniffing it, simply because he was well aware that the trick displeased his superior.

"No. Do you?" Winter jeered back at him.

"I do."

"Oh, the sheerest bluff!"

"No, no bluff. I know."

"Well, let me imagine that it is bluff, anyway; for brute force man might be, I won't give you credit for being such a brute as to keep that poor old lady undergoing the torments of hell through a delicate silence of yours."

"Didn't you say that I have all the bad qualities of the Latin temperament?" answered Furneaux. "Now, there is something cat-like in the Latin; a Spaniard, for example, can be infernally cruel at a bullfight; and I'll admit that I can, too.

"But 'torments of hell' is rather an exaggeration, nor will the 'torments' last mortally long, for to-morrow afternoon at about four—at the hour that I choose—in the hour that I am ready—Miss Marsh will drive up to the door there."

"Evidently you were not born in Jersey, but in Gascony," Winter said sourly.

"Wrong again! Jersey man will bounce any Gascon off his feet," said Furneaux. "And, just to pile up the agony, here is another sample for you. Please excuse me for sniffing. To-morrow afternoon, at that same hour—about four—I shall have—at scoundrel Osborne in custody charged with the murder in Feldsham Mansions."

Nearly Choked in Rage

"Mr. Osborne?" whispered Winter, lowering and frowning above his diminutive adversary. "Oh, Furneaux, you drive me to despair by your folly. If you are mad, which I hope you are, that explains. I suppose, your delusion that others are mad, too."

"Genius is closely allied with insanity," said Furneaux carelessly; "but, you observe that I have never plumed any doubt as to your saneness.

"Wait, you'll see: my case against Osborne is now complete. A warrant can't be refused, not even by you, and to-morrow, as sure as you stand there, I lay my hand on your protege's shoulder."

Winter nearly choked in his rage.

"All right! We'll see about that!" he said with a furious nod of menace. Furneaux chuckled; and now by a simultaneous impulse they walked apart, Furneaux whistling. In Winter a whirlwind of passion blowing the last shreds of pity from his soul.

He was soon sitting at the bedside of Pauline Dessaux, now convalescent, though the coming of this strange man threw her afresh into a tumult of agitation. But Winter comforted her, smoothed her hand, assured her that there was no cause for alarm.

"I know that you took Mademoiselle de Bercy's diary," he said to her, "and it was very wrong of you not to give it up to the police, and to hide yourself as you did when your evidence was wanted.

"But, don't be frightened—I am here to-night to see if you can throw any light on the sad disappearance of Miss Marsh. The suspense is killing her mother, and I feel sure that it has some connection with the Feldsham Mansions affair. Now, can you help me? Think well, me."

"Oh, I cannot—I am wrong for hands is paroxysm of distress—"if I could, I would. I cannot imagine——"

"Well, then, that part of my inquiry is ended. Only, listen to this attentively. I want to ask you one other question. Why did you leave the Exhibition early on the night of the murder, and where did you go to?"

"I—I—I, sir?" she said, pointing to her guiltless breast with a gaping mouth; "I, poor me, I left——?"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

His Idea of Heaven

THE druggist approached the Celestial gate. Peter opened the portal for him and bade him enter and join the heavenly choir.

"Not so fast," admonished the custodian of pills. "Before I go in there I want to ask a few questions. Have you any city directories in Paradise?"

"No," replied St. Peter.

"Any remedies for growing hair on bald heads and door knobs?"

"None."

"Any soda fountains?"

"We don't know what they are."

"Do you sell stamps?"

"We don't use them here."

"And last but not least, have you any telephones?"

"We are not."

"Then I'll go in, for I guess this is Heaven all right, all right."

Forgot the "Age"

THE check which the comely young German woman handed in at the window of a savings fund the other day was made payable to Gretchen H. Schmidt, and she had indorsed it simply Gretchen Schmidt. The man at the receiving teller's window called her back just as she was turning away to rectify the mistake.

"You don't deposit this quite this way," he explained. "See, you have forgotten the 'H.'"

The young woman looked at her check and blushed a rosy red.

"Ach, so I ha!," she murmured, and wrote reptedly:

"Age 23."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-one years of age and deeply in love with a young lady who is two years younger. I have told her I loved her and she says she loves me.

When I go to her house she treats me very nicely; so do her mother and sisters and brothers. But it's quite the reverse when we go to a dance.

Although I am a good dancer, and all my lady acquaintances say so, she never wants to dance with me, and leaves me to sit out the numbers while she dances with another.

She can goa out with other young men.

Please tell what I should do.

C. G. L.

SUCH a cause is not sufficient for worry.

If the woman know she had hurt you feelings, she would assuredly her very sorry.

Perhaps she likes to enjoy herself and does not realize that she offended you. Too fond demand too much of her, and remember that, to be happy, both the and the woman must be willing to give people as possible before choosing your life partner.

SEEMS SELFISH IN YOU

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen years of age. Two months ago I was introduced to a young lady one year my junior, and since then we have been very close friends. When she is not with me, however, she receives the attentions of others, and this I do not like, because I am in love with her. She always tells me when she speaks to others.

Would you advise me to tell her I do not like the friendship that exists between her and those others? I do not like to hurt her feelings.

M. F.

IT would be very selfish for you to exclude all but yourself from her friendship.

You like her, therefore give her every opportunity of meeting men that she may be able to compare them with you and eventually prefer you above them all.

As you are both young, and are to change it is only fair that you both should make the acquaintance of as many people as possible before choosing your life partner.

AUTO OUTING AT FALMOUTH

By J. C. KERRISON.

No matter what the weather conditions may be to-morrow, it will not interfere to any considerable degree with the Spring outing of the Bay State Automobile Association, as the members and their friends have determined that no matter what comes or goes they will have their outing on the time specified. So to-morrow morning the members and friends of the Bay State Automobile Association, to the number of about 150, will leave their several domiciles and start for Falmouth, where in their own inimitable manner they will celebrate the glories and achievements of Bunker Hill, Inc.

In the route from Boston to Falmouth there are two routes as far as West Bridgewater, from which point but one route can be followed. The elective routes are first Lovell's avenue, Marlboro, Randolph, Brockton, Campello to West Bridgewater. The second route is Lovell avenue, Saugus, Peabody, Stoughton, South Easton to West Bridgewater. From West Bridgewater the route goes through Middleboro, Wareham, Onset, Monument Beach, West Falmouth to within two miles of Falmouth, where a special sign-board will direct the tourists direct to Hotel Slippewissett.

In order to be present at the real kicking off, it will be necessary for all to arrive not later than 12:30, as at that time, by special permission of the Control Board, the grace of the president, and the convenience of the cook, the great New England clam-bake will be mustered and served.

Subsequent to the bake, the annual ball game will be held, and the Matts, composed by all that is good and faithful to put it over the Jeffs. The latter team will be captained by Ralph Coburn, who has in previous years led his team to victory and victory against the Matts, headed by Harry Hoslett.

The Falmouth brass band will discourse music throughout the day—that is if some of the expert musicians do not interfere with them.

"International highways are the need of both the United States and Canada," said Dr. Charles P. Percival, who is making a 10,000-mile tour of the United States in the Alden-Detroit "Bull-Dog," and who has already traversed the United States from Denver to Portland, Me., Boston to Nashville and Cincinnati to Savannah, Ga., and who perhaps knows the main travelled thoroughfares of the country as no other man. Said Dr. Percival:

"Much progress has been made by both Canada and the United States towards the consummation of two great international highways, but strange to say this great work has all been done on the Pacific Coast, and within four years the 'Pacific Highway' will stretch in absolutely first-class condition from Tia Juana, Mexico, northwards through the Pacific Coast States and British Columbia; and that within the same period an equally fine class 'Canadian Highway' will stretch from its intersection with the 'Pacific Highway' at British Columbia through the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, to the city of Winnipeg."

How I Made My Hair Grow

Woman With Marvelously Beautiful Hair Gives Simple Home Prescription Which She Used With Most Remarkable Results.

I was greatly troubled with dandruff and falling hair. I tried many advertised hair preparations and various prescriptions, but they all usually failed. Some of them made my hair greasy so it was impossible to comb it or do it up properly. I think that many of the things I tried were positively injurious and from my own experience I cannot too strongly caution you against using preparations containing wood alcohol and other poisonous substances. I believe they injure the roots of the hair. After my long list of failures, I finally found a simple prescription which I can unhesitatingly state is, beyond doubt, the most wonderful thing for the hair I have ever seen. Many of my friends have also used it, and obtained wonderful effects therefrom. It not only is a powerful stimulant to the growth of the hair and for restoring gray hair to its natural color, but it is equally good for removing dandruff, giving the hair life and brilliancy, etc., and for the purpose of keeping the scalp in healthy condition. It also makes the hair easier to comb and arrange in nice form. I have a friend who used it two months and during that time it has not only stopped the falling of his hair and wonderfully increased its growth, but it practically restored all of his hair to its natural color. You can obtain the ingredients for making this wonderful preparation from almost any druggist. The prescription is as follows: 1 oz. Bay Rum, 4 oz. Menthol Crystals, 1 dram; 7 ozs. Distilled Water, 2 ozs. If too like it perfumed, add a few drops of Tokalon Perfume. Apply night and morning after ingredients are well mixed. Be necessary to shake bottle thoroughly into the scalp.

Go to your druggist and ask for an eight-ounce bottle containing 4 ozs. Bay Rum, one-half dram of Menthol Crystals, 1 dram; and one ounce of Lavoris or Cocoanut Oil. Mix the ingredients Crystals together, then add the Bay Rum, in the Lavoris or Cocoanut Oil and the Talkon Perfume. Let it stand one-half hour and it is ready to use.

TO-DAY'S STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

The New York Curb christened the new Chinese bonds "yen 5s," not seeming to care whether or not the characterization confused them with various Japanese bonds.

$ $ $

The news that State street regards as of the greatest importance is the report that the iron and steel trade really is improving. Experts and trade journals appear to agree on this.

$ $ $

This market is a creeping, dull affair, with a shifting of interest from one group to another by the manipulative element. It is known that there has been strong manipulation, while the amount of this operation has been small.

$ $ $

There is no doubt that outside interest is increasing to come extinct, although this promises to be of slow growth. The market is becoming broader all the time, as evidenced by the number of stocks dealt in, and the optimistic sentiment is becoming more pronounced with the passing of each day.

$ $ $

The railroads now have their operating expenses under control, and are converting decreases to gross into net increases, and that traffic is established as to their ability to maintain present dividends. The trend of railroad stocks now seems to be upward.

$ $ $

Good buying of Steel is seen on the recessions, and is due to indications that the chain battle now being waged between the Steel Trust and independents may develop into a real fight. Should such a fight develop, Steel ought to advance because its extensive facilities and lower cost of production, together with its ability to deliver quicker than the independents, would enable it to obtain the greater part of the new business that is going to be placed by the railroads.

$ $ $

St. Paul's crop report showed generally excellent conditions of corn, wheat and other grains, with prospects of bumper yields. Lack of moisture and hot weather in some sections have done no particular damage. Reports from all divisions show generally favorable weather conditions during the past week. All small grains in Minnesota are reported to be in the best of condition. Iowa and Dakota grain is reported as never having looked better. On the Western division rain is needed, although the present condition of the crops is quite favorable.

$ $ $

The annual number of Poor's Manual of Industrials for 1911 has been issued. It contains 2,200 pages of text, giving information about industrial corporations and is revised to May 20 last. An effort has been made by the publishers to present figures about all industrial enterprises in which the public is interested. Aggregate stocks and bonds of companies appearing therein approximate $20,000,000,000. This is the second edition, and the present book contains several hundred more titles than were included in the 1910 edition.

$ $ $

A cable said that Jacob H. Schiff proposed to give millions to found a university at Frankfort, Germany. The proposition was considered appropriate, for Frankfort, Germany, is Mr. Schiff's native city and one to which American finance owes much. But it was suggested that it would also be becoming for Mr. Schiff to give a few millions to Frankfort, Ky., which is the home city of Southern Pacific.

COPPER STOCKS LEAD MARKET

NEW YORK, June 16.—Improvement was shown in the stock market to-day, with the coppers again leading the upturn. Better weather for crops in the West was an influential factor. Steel was another strong feature, making an initial gain of three-eighths.

Issues under pressure yesterday showed fractional gains to-day. Great Northern preferred, Union Pacific and Wabash preferred were among the prominent stocks that ranged above yesterday's close. Despite the strength of the market practically all the trading was professional. Demand being little demand from outside sources.

Amalgamated Copper rose 1¼ and Anaconda 1. Smelter rose ¾. Within a few minutes of the opening Steel gained another eighth, sending it to 79¼. Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, Chicago, Rock Island, Transit and Erie were strengthened. Southern Pacific was the exception, declining a way up ⅝. Atchison scored a gain of ⅛. The curb market opened irregular. Standard Oil was unchanged at 640. American Tobacco was off four points.

There was a general movement in Americans on the London exchange to-day, their position being that of gaining after a steady advance. Mexicans were strong.

FAST CRAFT IN WATER FETE

FALL RIVER, June 16.—William H. Hand, Jr., the famous motor boat designer and builder of New Bedford, will enter two of the speediest motor craft obtainable in competition with Glenn H. Curtiss' hydro-aeroplane in his aeronautical exhibitions during the water carnival, one of the features of the cotton centennial anniversary celebration which opens here Monday.

Visitors who never before saw the interior of a cotton mill will be afforded the opportunity of witnessing every stage of the different processes through which cotton first enters the mill up to the time that it comes out as the finished product. The cotton manufacturing exhibit which begins Monday at the Bradford Durfee Textile School directly following the crowning of the "Queen of the Carnival." The manufacturers' exposition at the State Armory and the art exhibition at the Public Library are features in the historical exhibit at Music Hall, one of the largest and most complete collections of relics ever shown will be of exceeding interest.

Tuesday is automobile day and automobiles of every make and description will fill about the city. Although the reception every owner of a motor vehicle in the city has signified his intention of participating in the big auto parade.

Wednesday the big floats parade will hold the centre of interest, and on Thursday, which will be known as Merchants' day, the Horse Show on the North Pavilion begin the afternoon's ceremonies. Saddle rolls and sprightly young fillies from Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Sandy Point farm in Portsmouth, R. I., will be among the many drawing cards which will attract lovers of fine bred horseflesh on this day.

The visit of President Taft comes on Friday.

"Aw, for the Love of Mike, Mutt! Be Reasonable."

"Jeff fights for a little bit of revenge," by "Bud" Fisher. Don't miss the funny doings of Mutt and Jeff in next Sunday's AMERICAN.

"Girls Need Time to Primp," Says Chief Clerk Callaghan. So They Do

Primping Time Makes Work Easier for Girls, And Music Does Still More for Them

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner.

Let us gravely salute Mr. A. J. Callaghan.

Mr. Callaghan has issued an order giving the young women in his employ fifteen minutes time in which "to primp."

This time is taken from the regular working day of the girls. And Mr. Callaghan justifies the startling innovation by saying that the right kind of girl wants a certain amount of time to make sure that her hair is exactly right, her skirt properly fastened in the back, her nose not shiny, her skirt hanging evenly in front, her puffs looking as natural as possible, etc., etc.

The ten young women who work under the control of the chief clerk arrive at eight forty-five in the morning. They are fresh from the crush and the scramble of our civilized methods of transportation. The wise clerk says:

"Young ladies, take your time. Spend the next fifteen minutes making yourselves beautiful, taking the wrinkles out, putting on the finishing touches, then get to work at nine o'clock, and I know you will work better."

This is wisdom that would have been worthy of Solomon. And if Solomon had had typewriters under him, wearing cuffs, hobble skirts and living in the suburbs, it is likely that he would have been ahead of Chief Clerk Callaghan with the fifteen minutes primping time.

Chief Clerk Callaghan says again:

"I am sure the girls will do better work because they know they have the extra fifteen minutes to prepare for the day. The girl who primps is to be commended, not sneered at. It is the right kind of pride."

Undoubtedly, and Mr. Callaghan is the kind of chief clerk to be commended, not sneered at.

Would that more chief clerks knew how much it means to give working people fifteen minutes extra to themselves, instead of everlastingly trying to squeeze fifteen minutes more work out of them.

It would be a very good thing now if Mr. Callaghan and other employers could realize what a reasonable amount of GOOD MUSIC would do for girls in the course of a day's work. We do not mean a large Symphony Orchestra, or any great expense. Simply inexpensive music, such as that which is supplied by the marvellous automatic musical instruments of our day, would be the greatest possible blessing to millions of workingwomen in this country.

The experiment was tried in Georgia by an intelligent and humane man, J. H. Hale, the biggest fruit grower in New England, and the ablest, probably, in the whole country.

In his Georgia orchards he had young women packing fruit. The fruit ripened quickly; it was important to have it packed promptly. The more work the girls did within the working hours, the more money they could make, and the better for their employer.

It was to their interest and to Mr. Hale's interest that the girls should work efficiently.

He noticed that early in the afternoon the girls became listless and tired. He remembered that when he came home feeling tired in the evening a little music changed his mood, and he considered—which many employers do not consider—that possibly the girls working for him might be made out of the same flesh and blood as himself.

So, every afternoon, he hired an artistic aggregation of colored artists, with violins, banjos, etc., to come and play while the young girls packed the peaches.

The result in the amount of work done was remarkable. And more important than the extra packing and the extra profits for workers and employer was the improved mental and physical condition of the girls.

The work that had been hard, tiring and monotonous became easy and cheerful.

There is many an employer who might learn a lesson from Mr. Hale.

If workers packing cigars, making paper boxes, or engaged in any dull work could have a little simple, inexpensive, good music at their noon hour, and more music toward the end of the afternoon, it would be excellent for them and excellent for the employers.

Ages ago the fighting rulers of men learned the power of music. Every general can tell you that he can march his fighting soldiers twice as far with music as he could without music.

When the men are tired and their feet begin shuffling along wearily, the noise of the band drives away the fatigue and quickens the pace.

Powerful men have always been interested in their human fighting machines. And long ago they found out that to get good fighters you must "make the job attractive." You must give music, medals, uniforms, pensions, titles, epaulets.

It is almost time for civilized beings to do for the army of industry what the savages of militarism did long ago for the fighting armies.

Let the employer provide a first-class machine to reproduce the finest voices and the best music for the girls under his control, as they spend the noon hour. And then give some more music later in the afternoon, when work begins to drag and the hours seem long.

If Mr. Callaghan should be the first among human beings to arrange for fifteen minutes "primping time" in the morning and an hour or two of music in the afternoon his name might be engraved on solid stone many years from now. Selah!

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

SHOEMAKERS IN GERMANY.

Editor AMERICAN:

I noticed by the papers that Judge Harris in a speech made in the Legislature at Washington on reciprocity, said in part that it would ruin the shoe manufacturers of Massachusetts if the duty was taken off shoes, as shoes made in England and Germany would come in here in large quantities and we could not compete with them on account of the cheap labor in those countries.

This has been the great cry of the "interests" for a long while, and I desire to show to those who may not possibly understand the real situation how futile it really is. They say, for instance, in Brockton we pay our edge-setters $25 a week. In Germany they only pay $9 a week. How can we hope to compete?

This sounds like a good argument, but there is a flaw in it. The man in Germany who gets $9 a week does not produce one-third the work in a day that the man in Brockton does who gets $25 a week. They never tell this part of it, though, in their story.

It isn't what amount of money a man is paid, it is what amount of work he does for that sum of money that constitutes the manufacturing cost of the article. Therefore, if a German mechanic gets $9 a week and only produces one-fifth the amount of the American workman who receives $25, the German labor is "cheap," is it?

LICENSES FOR MANICURES

What is to become of all the manicure girls who have no $75 to buy a license? How are they to live? There are many who merely make a living—no more, and spend at that. Who gets all this license money?

Boston and Chicago

The Representatives of the Great Lake City Return Home with Awakened Confidence in This Port and Its Future—The Two Commercial Capitals are Intended by Nature for Allies.

The representatives of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce return to-day to their home city from their visit to Boston.

We hope that Chicago has gained as much from these representatives of the business of Chicago as we feel that we ourselves have gained. We know that our own awakened confidence in Boston and her future must have been imparted to these influential business men of Chicago.

It was not until recently that Bostonians came to realize the natural advantages which we possess and which, when turned to the highest utility, will make us the chief open Winter port for the great Western business that clears through Chicago and the great North Western territories when the Grand Trunk comes to our threshold.

The representatives of our business interests have entertained these distinguished Chicagoans and could not have failed unconsciously to imbue them with something of our own absolute belief that Boston was intended by nature and industrial and commercial history to be the commercial ally of Chicago. Boston and Chicago ought to be the great northern clearing houses, one of the inland and the other of the ocean trade.

Our pleasant social intercouse with these business men has gained us more than the prospect of trade. These visits which promote the social alliance of business men have a significance to the welfare of the country which would be important if it were wholly sentimental; but like the influence of pleasant thoughts upon our physical bodies, the pleasant social relations between the remote business interests of our country have their material advantages as well.

To the representatives of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce, Boston says, "au revoir but not good-bye."

Where, Oh Where, Is the Old New England Trader?

He Made Us What We Are, But He's Gone—in Baseball, at Least. "They Gave Us Lemons for Peaches."

In the "good old days," the New England Yankee was regarded as a rather slick trader. That's how he gathered his wealth. But, alas, the "good old days" are gone. Once more, sad to relate, Boston has been worsted in a baseball trade by Chicago.

Only a year ago we were lamenting the fact that Harry Lord, the peerless third baseman, and Amby McConnell, the nimble-footed second baseman, had been transferred to the shores of Lake Michigan in exchange for Billy Purtell, who never shone at third base in Chicago and hasn't since with Boston; and Frank Smith, who pitched a no-hit game once upon a time.

Here it is again. "Peaches" Graham, the heavy-hitting catcher; "Clifford" Curtis, who might have become a good pitcher; Goode and Collins, both gilt-edged fielders—gone, and Johnny Kling, a once-but-no-more great catcher; Weaver and Griffin, who have failed as pitchers, and Kaiser, who now and then plays acceptably in the field, coming to us in exchange.

The Rustlers have not lived up to their name. If they cannot rustle any better than that, they should keep away from the big cities and their artful bunco men. Graham, the idol, whose three-baggers used to look so good, has left us, and in his place Mr. Russell has engaged a man to "teach his team how to play baseball." That is enough. Never mind the others. It is too gloomy to talk about. The vernacular of one Boston "fan" expresses it best—"They gave us lemons for Peaches."

Frank Chance, the "peerless leader," as they call him in Chicago, put through a great deal just at the right time for Frank Chance, and his Cubs begin to look like pennant winners again. Boston is still in last place, and Mr. Russell's latest trade will not help to get the once famous National "Bean-Eaters" out of that inglorious position.

If Fred Tenney would sacrifice himself like Frank Chance has done, and manage his team from the bench; if William Hepburn Russell would strengthen his team instead of weakening it, there might be some hope.

But, cheer up, they will still be playing baseball in Boston when the last trump blows, and the merry crack of the bat still sounds good. The main thing to lament is the disappearance of the good old Yankee trader from New England.

On the Cut-Rate Route

By MILES OVERHOLT

I HAVE purchased drugs of a cut-rate kind, for I'm sick from a cut-rate cold;
I've a cut-rate style and a cut-rate mind and I spend but cut-rate gold;
I've a cut-rate suit which doesn't fit such a cut-rate form as mine,
And a cut-rate hat to go with it, and I pay for a cut-rate shine.

On cut-rate meals I always dine, and I fumble a cut-rate tip,
And I pay cut-rates for cut-rate wine, and a cut-rate sherry flip;
At night I hike to a cut-rate slow in a cut-rate taxicab,
And I sit 'way back in a cut-rate row and a cut-rate program grab.

I travel, too, on a cut-rate road in cut-rate tourist cars,
And I wire ahead by a cut-rate code, and I smoke cut-rate cigars.
I always wear a cut-rate smile, and I garner cut-rate wealth;
I have lived my life in a cut-rate style until I have cut-rate health.

L'ENVOI.

When Father Time has cut the rates; when I must amble hence;
When I must pause and cut my dates and hustle to the whence,
Let me dodge the medal man, who saves, a day ere my last breath,
So I can sink beneath the waves and die a cut-rate death.

The Confessions of a Boston Manicure Girl.

"I was a perfectly respectable, hard working girl then, and I am now, but no thanks to the bankers and brokers and business men that used to patronize me when I worked in a Washington street barber shop," says this manicure girl. See
